The Automobile Capital.
The G. M. Laboratory.
Machines That Think.
Henry Ford's Telegram.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DETROIT, May 28.

FINE WEATHER in the capital of the world's automobile industry.

The event looked forward to at the moment is the annual 500-mile race that will start at Indianapolis next Monday, Decoration Day.

This year Edsel Ford will drive the car that will start the races. He will lead them around the track once in a twelve-cylinder Lincoln at a moderate pace, about 70 miles an hour, and start them after one lap around the big saucer.

MR. ERSKINE, president of the Studebaker Company, has entered five stock cars. Practically all the others were built for racing. General Motors and Ford do not compete.

Capt. Rickenbacker will be there. No American should forget him. Best of all the air fighters we sent to Europe, he represents the courage and skill that this nation will need some day.

ON THE WALL of the General Motors research laboratory, occupying an entire building under the direction of Charles F. Kettering, you read:

"The death of a theory is the birth of a fact."

Mr. Kettering should add to that, for nobody knows it better:

"The birth of a sound theory sometimes wipes out fallacies mistaken for facts."

For instance, the theory that the earth goes round the sun wiped out many accepted "facts."

IN THAT admirable laboratory theories are born and transmuted into facts. You see a machine that can look into a mixture of metals and tell what is in the mixture. With that machine Archimedes could have analyzed Hero's golden crown without using the idea that occurred to him in his bath.

THERE IS a machine that looks into the center of a steel axle and photographs the slightest flaw.

There is a Neon lamp, mysteriously synchronized with a shaft making two thousand revolutions per minute. The light makes the moving object apparently stand still.

The shaft, instead of revolving so rapidly you cannot see it, is apparently at rest, can even be made to revolve, apparently, in the opposite direction.

An application of that scientific miracle may some day enable astronomers to study the fixed stars, planets and our sun, as though they were standing still.

IN THAT SAME laboratory, music is sent over a beam of light to a distant radio. There is no sound where the beam starts, if you cut off the light with your hand the music stops.

Near that transmission of music by light you see an engine used for experiments with engine "knocking" trouble. A knock that could be heard two blocks ceases when a certain fluid is added to the ordinary gasoline.

AND MORE wonderful, the knocking when at its worst stops immediately when a tiny uncorked bottle of a certain chemical is held before a pipe leading to the knocking.

None of this chemical goes into the fuel. The engine simply "sniffs" the odor, and stops knocking.

You have seen a lady brought out of a faint by holding salts to her nose. This is the same thing in mechanics.

Henry Ford had for his luncheon party yesterday, at the plant, his son Edsel, Mr. Sorensen, his manager, Mr. Cameron, M. C. Meigs, commonly known as "the Goliath of the American Weekly," this writer and some others. They all ate bread made of soy because Mr. Ford experiments with everything.

MR. FORD, who seemed not to have the slightest idea that we are all "enjoying a depression," was interested in showing about five hundred antique steam engines, gas engines and hot air furnaces to Mr. Meigs, who, like himself, knows all about oil feed, water pumps, valve gears, automatic governors and other mysteries.

Every steam engine that was ever run, from the first to the latest Diesel product, is in Mr. Ford's antique collection, including even one of his own giant engines that turned out fifteen million model T Fords.

HE HAS NOT in his collection the primitive engine supposed to have run in the Serapion at Alexandria long before the birth of Christ. That probably no longer exists. If he could find it, he would make it run. He has skilled mechanics restoring these old engines, enough mechanics to equip an ordinary large factory.

WHEN THIS writer arrived at Dearborn yesterday morning Mr. Ford had just answered a telegram received from L'Anse, Mich., telling him that the only bank at L'Anse had closed and asking "Won't you advance seventy-five thousand" to start the bank going again?

Mr. Ford's reply, which this writer has his permission to print, indicates that Mr. Ford thinks the kind of bank that decides to die might as well stay dead. He wired to the L'Anse committee that had asked for seventy-five thousand dollars as follows:

"We have hundreds of similar requests and thus far we have not been convinced that it is wise to support a system that has so lamentably failed in protecting the savings which working peo-

Garner Hits Back at Hoover on Aid Program

WILL PUSH 2 BILLION RELIEF PLAN

House Speaker in Fight 'to Finish' Over Proposal; President Makes Attack

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—President Hoover and Speaker John N. Garner, of the House, today crossed swords in a finish duel on unemployment relief legislation.

With the President denouncing Garner's $2,100,000,000 program as a "pork-barrel" measure, the Speaker smiled and went right ahead laying plans for its passage in the House within 10 days.

The measure was virtually assured of House approval, with Democrats generally supporting it and many Republicans pledging aid. Pressure for relief legislation admittedly has increased.

PROGRAM REVISED

The program, which was made public in rough draft, was being revised by the Speaker's aids, and will be further revised by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. Hoover's opposition, expressed in a scathing statement, was based chiefly upon Garner's proposal for a billion-dollar bond issue for public buildings, rivers and harbors and flood control improvements.

The measure also adds a billion dollars to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with blanket authority to make loans to aid

HOOVER SHIFTS TO SALES TAX

By EDWARD L. RODDAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—President Hoover stands foursquare behind the general manufacturers' sales tax as the best method of balancing the federal budget, according to Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio.

The Ohio Senator made the announcement last night after an extended White House conference to discuss the general legislative situation and also the approaching presidential campaign.

The declaration by Fess that Mr. Hoover favors the sales tax is expected to prove a powerful factor with Congress.

Meanwhile, the votes of a half-dozen senators were sought by administration leaders today to insure adoption of a sales tax as a substitute for numerous excises in the new billion-dollar revenue bill.

Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, one of the sales tax leaders, insisted it would be adopted. He declared time and again that a "majority of the Senate favors the tax," but other administration leaders discounted Reed's claims.

Girl's Leap Over Bridge Rail Foiled

MISS ESTHER JOHNSON, 19

Second Death Try Reveals N. Y. Police Seek Her

Esther Johnson, 19, of Avalon, whose habit of jumping from high places has landed her in the toils of police twice within a year—the latest being last night—is wanted in New York, charged with the theft of $680 and jewelry, according to word received by Avalon police early today.

Her latest episode of jumping was interrupted by John Cohen, of 1600 Center avenue, who prevented her from leaping over the railing of Sixth Street Bridge, police say. She told police she wanted to die because she couldn't pay her room rent.

A year ago Esther was injured by leaping from a third-floor window of a Ben Avon home to elude police who wanted her for the theft of a coat from a North Side woman.

Arraigned in Morals Court today she was ordered turned over to Avalon police pending arrival of New York officers. The girl admitted she had returned from New York a week ago, but denied the larceny charge.

SURVIVORS TELL OF SHIPWRECK

BOSTON, May 28.—(AP.)—The steamship City of Chattanooga arrived at Boston today with scraped and twisted plates extending 20 feet back from its bow, and a broken forward flagstaff, telling a tale of a collision at sea which sank the freighter Grecian and killed four of its crew.

Of the 32 members of the Grecian's crew, three who were seriously injured had been removed to Vineyard Haven Hospital yesterday, and 29 disembarked at Boston this morning. They were whisked away in taxicabs to the offices of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company, owners of the Grecian.

Passengers and others aboard the Chattanooga, arriving in Boston a day late as a result of the collision, told of the crash in the early morning darkness and fog yesterday off Block Island. They said the impact was not great and that most of the rescued members of the freighter's crew clambered directly aboard the City of Chattanooga while Capt. C. G. Borum pressed his ship's bow tightly against the gaping wound in the Grecian's side, preventing an inrush of water that would have sunk the freighter.

TRIAL OF CURTIS TO OPEN WEEK OF JUNE 27

Prosecutor's Announcement In Lindy Hoax Held to Confirm Indictment Hint

FLEMINGTON, N. J., May 28.—(AP.)—An indictment, presumed to be against John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk hoaxer in the Lindbergh case, was handed today to Justice Thomas Trenchard, who ordered it delivered to Quarter Sessions Court for further proceedings.

J. Chester Skillman, foreman of the grand jury which considered the Curtis case earlier this week, handed three indictments to Justice Trenchard, who announced that one of them dealt with Julia Winterstein on a charge of murder. The other two, he said, would be sent to Quarter Sessions.

The grand jury heard the evidence on the Curtis case Thursday and after it had heard several witnesses and seen Curtis' confession, reports were current that an indictment had been voted unanimously on the first ballot. This was not officially confirmed, nor was it denied.

Prosecutor Anthony Hauck would not say definitely today that the indictment had been returned against Curtis, but he did say:

"The Curtis case will be tried not later than the week of June 27."

INDICTMENT LIKELY

As an indictment is a necessary preliminary to trial, this statement was taken as positive corroboration of the general belief that one of today's indictments was against Curtis.

The prosecutor said he received a telegram this morning from W. C. Pender, Norfolk attorney, who will defend Curtis, saying he could not be ready to try the case by June 13, the day the prosecutor had hoped to begin trial.

'JAFSIE' DESCRIPTION

Pittsburgh city detectives today were given a description of "John," the man to whom Dr. J. F. Condon paid $50,000 ransom on the promise that Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., would be returned to his parents alive and well.

The description was read by Detective Inspector Frank R. Boyd, from a circular mailed him by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police. It follows:

"Age 30 to 35 years; height 5 feet 9 inches; athletic build; speaks with Scandanavian or German accent; weight 150 to 160 pounds; rather light complexion; medium light hair; sharp almond eyes, wide spaced; high forehead; pointed chin; when last seen was wearing soft brown hat, long black overcoat of light fabric and black shoes."

Fair, Warmer Here For Memorial Day

After a frost tonight in the lowlands, accompanied by temperatures of 40 to 45, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman announced the mercury would gradually rise and predicted fair and warmer weather for Memorial Day.

A below normal temperature area now hovering over the West is expected to pass by Monday. It will be cool in the morning, Brotzman said, but should be warm in the afternoon. For Sunday he predicted fair weather with rising temperature.

Candidate Collapses Delivering Address

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 28.—(AP.)—Dr. A. A. Van Dyke, "regular" candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, collapsed last night as he was delivering his keynote address.

He had attacked prohibition as "fundamentally wrong," and outlined an economy program for the state government when he was unable to continue. His physician announced that it was the result of a nervous strain from overwork.

STATE CARS AID BONUS MARCH

ZANESVILLE, O., May 28.—(INS.)—The happy-go-lucky but determined "bonus army" resumed its on-to-Washington parade early today after an uneventful night of rest in the Muskingum County fairgrounds.

Before most of the city was awake, the 300 singing, bantering war veterans tumbled out of makeshift beds this morning, ate a free breakfast, and set out in state highway trucks for Wheeling, W. Va.

The contingent was scheduled to finish its parade across Ohio and reach West Virginia at about 10 a. m. today. In trucks supplied by West Virginia the army will be transported to Pennsylvania. That state will give them another lift and within five days they expect to be at President Hoover's doorstep.

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 28.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania Highway Department trucks were to be at West Alexander, on the West Virginia line, to pick up the "bonus crusaders" when they arrive from the West.

Aviator Flies Low To Warn of Blaze

MEADVILLE, Pa., May 28.—(AP.)—An airplane, circling low with motors roaring unusually loud, attracted attention to a fire which destroyed a barn and poultry house on the Frank Minnick farm near here today.

Three hundred chickens and all tools and farm equipment of the place were burned. Damage was estimated by Minnick at $3,000.

Release Intruder on Promise 'Not to Do It Again'

Two Wilkinsburg children captured a burglar in their home at 1669 Laketon road, late last night and then let him go on his promise "not to do it again."

The two heroes to their playmates today were Zoe Fessenden, 11, and her brother, Teddy, 10.

They were at play across the street from their home when they saw someone turn on a light in their third-floor apartment. Believing their father, H. Fessenden, had returned home from a visit, they ran into the house.

As they raced up the stairs, the girl called to her father and the light was extinguished.

Teddy called his companions and led them in a search of his home. A youth, aged about 19, was found hiding behind a living room door, police said.

Assured he had not taken anything, Zoe put him on his "honor" and let him go. Spurning an offer to search him, she said:

"I believe you. If you'll promise never to do this again, I'll put you on your honor and let you go—and I won't tell the police."

FALLS OUT WINDOW AT HOME

Chairman of Big Company In Ill Health for Some Time, Doctors Reveal

CHICAGO, May 28.—(AP.)—Edward F. Swift, Sr., chairman of Swift & Co., plunged to death at 9 a. m. today from the window of his sixth story apartment at 1550 North State street.

He was 64 years old and had been in ill health for several weeks.

Charles H. Swift, his brother and vice chairman of the packing company, said that on his physician's advice Mr. Swift had planned to leave Tuesday for a vacation and rest in Europe.

BROTHER'S STATEMENT

Charles Swift said:

"His affairs are in excellent condition."

The veteran packer had fallen from his window to the alley at the rear of the North State street apartment. Death was instant.

He was the son of the pioneer packer, Gustavus Franklin Swift, founder of the firm that became the world's largest.

While other great Chicago families had relinquished their hold on the industries that made them great and that they had made great, the Swifts had clung to active leadership in their international packing business.

At his death, Edward T. Swift was chairman of the Chicago house and president of the Compania Swift Internacional, which does anextensive business in South America.

LOUIS SWIFT, Brother of Edward, is president of Swift & Co., and other brothers, Charles, George and Harold, held high offices in Swift's and affiliated interests.

ASSOCIATES STUNNED

The news of the tragedy stunned his associates in the "yards" where he had been known since childhood. Executives of his company quickly assembled in the offices at the Union Stock Yards and, after a conference, the statement was issued by Charles H. Swift. It read:

"Edward F. Swift has been in poor health for several weeks and on the advice of his physician had arranged to leave Tuesday for a vacation in Europe. His affairs are in excellent condition."

Although all the big packers had been disappointed in the refusal of the United States Supreme Court recently to modify the famous "packers' consent" decree to allow them to venture into retail marketing, officials of Swift & Co. have since stated that their company was prepared fully for such a decision and its business was not adversely affected. Yesterday, the company's dividend was placed on a $1 annual dividend basis. It had been $2 theretofore.

Members of the family and servants informed the police Mr. Swift had arisen as usual at 6:30 a. m. Breakfast was served, and he then took his newspaper into the living room to read.

The family chauffeur, sitting in the Swift automobile in a driveway, saw the fatal fall of his employer.

Ethel Barrymore Ready To Make Talkie Debut

HOLLYWOOD, May 28.—(AP.)—Ethel Barrymore, of the stage, arrived in Hollywood last night to make her debut in talking pictures with her brothers, John and Lionel.

The three are under contract to appear in one picture, the story for which is being prepared at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

It will be the first time the "royal family" of the American stage has appeared together since the play "Pantaloon," as Miss Barrymore recalled it at the railroad station. She was met there with an embrace and kiss by John. Lionel could not get away from his studio in time, but there was a family reunion later.

Miss Barrymore was accompanied here by her sons, Samuel and John Drew Colt. Her daughter, Ethel Barrymore Colt, is appearing on the stage in Chicago, but will join her later.

The fact that Ethel Barrymore, "first lady of the theater," was "screen struck," was revealed exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in February. She said:

"It will be a wonderful thrill and I know I will like it. My only fear is the camera."

CREDIT OFFICIAL SEES TRADE STIMULANT IN U. S. LOAN

5 BILLION BOND PLAN URGED AS BUYING SPUR

Would Afford Prompt Relief, Lindberg Asserts; Lewin Scores Lax Leadership

Revived earning power of the millions of unemployed workers would provide immediate impetus to stabilizing business and serve as a stimulant to [illegible] recovery, a statement issued by B. J. Lindberg, president of Retail Credit Men's Association of Pittsburgh, declared today. Mr. Lindberg said the proposed $5,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan.

Considering the psychological effect of the [illegible] issue, Mr. Lindberg said, the public would [illegible] loan.

"There is no question that the credit situation would be improved through the Prosperity Loan. The revived earning power of millions of workers who are now employed would make it possible for them to buy.

QUICK RESULTS SEEN

"Workers would again have confidence and would not hesitate to avail themselves of the use of credit offered them. The stimulant created through the proposed federal aid would reach down into the retail credit business of the entire country and would produce immediate results in the stabilization of both trade and industry."

Decrying the national leadership which has failed to relieve the unemployment situation, Dr. A. E. Lewin, civic leader and member of the Board of Education, blamed it on greed and machinations, speaking over station WCAE last night to urge support for the prosperity loan. Dr. Lewin said:

"For a whole year local communities have been unable to cope with unemployment and its sequels. Makeshifts of all kinds have been created by fertile minds—all leading us into greater misery. The problem is simple, if you so make it. It is complicated, if you desire it. A few more simple minds in Washington with a simple duty to all the people, and not a complicated duty to classes, would see us out of chaos.

WOULD START MACHINERY

"Our misery is a national problem. Relief can only be given by the entire nation. A bond issue of $5,000,000,000 will relieve by starting the machinery going again. We need public buildings, a greater care of our waterways at sources and other projects. We want no charity. We want no dole system. We want work."

Lauding the efforts of families in caring for the spiritual and moral needs of their children in the face of greatest need, Mrs. Saul Lavine, in a radio appeal this morning, begged that their courage be not tested to the breaking point. Mrs. Lavine, president of the Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations, explained the problems faced by the Harris Family-Help-Family campaign, for which she was an active worker, and urged that work must be provided.

The Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day, pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, will appeal for the prosperity loan at 6:30 o'clock tonight from Station WCAE.

RELIEF DEMAND GROWS HERE

A large increase was noted in the number of cases reported this week to the Allegheny County Emergency Association for direct relief, according to S. E. Claney, relief director. In one lot 1,500 cases were turned over to the association by the Tarentum Community Relief Association when its funds ran out.

A large crowd of needy gathered at the Tarentum headquarters yesterday and for a time their clamor impeded the work of distribution. Direct relief will be given out by the Tarentum organization from Talbot bill funds distributed by the emergency association. Grocery orders will be issued and the bills paid by the emergency group.

Claney yesterday declared expenditures are approximately $22,000 daily and there are more than 25,000 cases on the list with steady increases daily.

OUTLINES STATE ECONOMY PLAN

HARRISBURG, May 28.—(AP.)—Fred W. Patterson, New Brighton, member of the General Assembly from Beaver County, today asserted that the state can affect a $17,000,000 saving through governmental economies.

After completing a study of state appropriations enacted at the regular and special sessions of the Legislature last year, Patterson said he believes no new taxes will be required for the state to balance its budget. Patterson said:

"It is not necessary to obtain additional revenues or to cut state grants to hospitals, homes and schools if the proper economies are made."

He predicted that the $17,000,000 savings might even be increased to $25,000,000 if a survey of all unexpended appropriation balances were made and unnecessary amounts lapsed.

Patterson made th following proposals:

A general 10 per cent cut in all departmental appropriations.

Abolition of the revenue department and restoration of the tax collecting task to the Auditor General's and State Treasurer's departments.

Colorado Likely To Back Roosevelt

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 28.—(AP.)—Colorado Democrats gathered today for their state convention, probably to take seats in the Roosevelt bandwagon.

ILLINOIS G. O. P. URGES REPEAL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 28.—(AP.)—The Republican party of Illinois, as represented by its state convention, has gone "wet."

A plank which called for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and of the state search and seizure act and modification of the Volstead law to permit sale and manufacture of beer and light wines, was nailed to the party's platform by the convention yesterday.

The platform adopted was the speech of former Gov. Len Small, hitherto a "dry" who, with former Mayor William Hale Thompson, of Chicago, controlled the meeting.

No "drys" raised their voices in protest and Small's address was adopted as the platform by unanimous action.

Two Get Jail Terms In Election Case

Members of the election board of the First District, Forward Township, were under sentence today following their appearance yesterday before Judge Elder W. Marshall. Three months ago they entered pleas of guilty to an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the election laws.

Shah Forgets 2 of 10 Wives In Will

NEW YORK, May 28.—(INS.)—The record of the old woman who lived in a shoe was bettered by the late Shah of Persia, it was learned today, when an accounting of the executor of his will was filed here.

The Shah, Ahmed Shah Kadjar, had so many wives he didn't know what to do, so apparently he just forgot two of them. After his death in 1930, eight of his wives were given shares in his $3,000,000 estate, but two were not mentioned at all, according to the Guaranty Trust Company, executor of the will. They stepped up after the will was probated, and action was reopened to take care of them.

TOKIO AIRMAN KEPT TO GROUND

SEATTLE, May 28.—(AP.)—While Nat C. Browne slept, the south wind he wanted to help him start a projected non-stop 5,000-mile flight to Tokio came and went today.

The New York aviator expressed disappointment at being awakened to a windless morning and settled down to await another breeze to help lift his heavily-laden monoplane into the air. Weather observers said it might come today.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 28.—(AP.)—Harold Bromley arrived here this morning in his oil-burning speed plane and announced he expected to take off non-stop for Los Angeles tonight.

Although he denied earlier, on leaving Camden, N. J., that he planned a Pacific flight, he said here his ship was equipped to carry enough fuel "to go to Tokio."

GARNER DEFIES HOOVER ON RELIEF

states and cities and promote productive enterprise, and $100,000,000 for direct relief.

For every objection raised by the President, Garner presented an answer, with indications that he may make a formal reply later.

While the President asserted that the bill distributes "pork" in public buildings and rivers and harbors projects, Garner retorted with Mr. Hoover's speech of acceptance in 1928 urging expenditure of a billion dollars for such projects.

The President's claim that the budget would be unbalanced was answered by Garner pointing to the one-fourth cent a gallon tax on gasoline carried in the bill specifically intended to preserve a balanced budget.

ATTACK BY HOOVER

Mr. Hoover, in his attack, said:

"This is not unemployment relief. It is the most gigantic 'pork barrel' ever proposed to the American Congress. It is an unexampled raid on the public treasury."

He charged that Garner sought to arouse the "cupidity" of towns and sections which would benefit by the projects by broadcasting the individual items of the bill. The President said:

"I just do not believe that such lack of intelligence or cupidity exists among the people of the United States."

When informed of the statement, Garner observed:

"We have been co-operating with the President since December, but he doesn't seem to want to co-operate with us."

He added that "nothing would please me more than to debate the question with the President," and said 40 Republicans had already offered to support the bill.

Reed Urges Pennsylvania Congressmen Against Plan

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP.)—Senator David A. Reed stepped into the midst of a faltering band of Pennsylvania Representatives today and warned them not to break ranks in their fight for a balanced national budget because scattering shrapnel from the Garner relief bill might hit them.

Provisions in the Speaker's measure, which would provide for construction of postoffices or for rivers and harbor work in every Congressional district in the state, were "put in as bait," Reed said. He declared:

"I hope they're not foolish enough to fall for it. The people of the state realize it isn't the thing to do."

Signs of several Pennsylvania Representatives departing from their session-long stand against a federal works and direct relief measure were seen in the House today. Few had studied the Garner bill, but when they saw appropriations for their own districts in it they felt they would be up against a great deal of sentiment from home if they opposed the measure.

'FREE' COUNTY WORK BARED

Kenna, Joseph and Frank Lorenzo, James W. McFederick and Justice of the Peace Albert T. Lorch, division superintendent of roads.

One witness testified that of six years he was on the county payroll four and a half years were spent working on private grounds. Another witness said he spent all of his summers doing gardening for Armstrong, Kenna, Fugassi and others.

County material used, it was stated, included iron pipe, drain tile, lumber, cement, brick, gravel, sand, shrubbery, paint, gasoline and trees, all obtained from county warehouses in quantities.

The work said to have been done was maintenance of grounds about their homes and in the case of Lorenzo, building of a greenhouse, a garage and a barn.

Thirty employes of the Department of Public Works who either worked on the jobs themselves or have personal first-hand knowledge of what work has been done are said to have been questioned to date.

As a result of the statements made last night all of these will be recalled beginning Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock to make sworn statements. None of those questioned last night was under oath.

WALKER PLANS TO STRIKE AT SEABURY

Mayor Threatens to 'Rip Open' New York Probe as Ouster Action Hints Grow

International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Further evidence in his attempt to link Mayor Walker with the $1,000,000 bank and brokerage accounts of the fugitive Russell T. Sherwood, erstwhile accountant, was being shaped up by Samuel Seabury today.

At the same time it was reported that the Mayor was planning a verbal onslaught designed to "rip wide open" Seabury and the Hofstadter committee's probe of the Walker regime.

OUSTER ACTION LOOMS

With the hearing recessed until Tuesday, and destined to continue for at least three more days, after then, it became more and more apparent that the sensational investigation may wind up in formal charges being filed with Gov. Roosevelt, demanding the Mayor's ouster from office.

However, persons close to Seabury appeared doubtful if he, himself, would take a hand in such action. They intimated that the evidence adduced at the hearing might be turned over to some civic group for use in demanding Walker's removal.

While avowedly expecting that Seabury was laying the groundwork for ouster proceedings against him, Walker evinced little concern. He declared he would demand a public hearing before the Governor.

STOCK PROFIT GIFT

Paul Block, newspaper publisher, testified the $246,000 stock profit which he made for his friend, Mayor Walker, really amounted to giving the latter "something for nothing."

It was out of pure friendship he did this, the publisher declared, saying to him the Mayor was not the Mayor, but "Jimmy Walker," his friend.

Mayor Walker today denied reports that he considered resigning or that he asked Park Commissioner Walter Herrick to resign. Herrick contradicted testimony yesterday which Walker gave or the stand previously concerning a deal in Interstate Trust Company stock.

Captive Sparrow Released By Ripping Woodwork

A baby sparrow was free today from the chimney which had held it captive two days in the home of Harry M. Himelblau, of 641 Collins avenue, because three men worked for two hours yesterday tearing away brick and wood.

Trying its wings apparently for the first time Wednesday, the bird flew into the house through an open window and fell through an opening above a brick fireplace, according to an explanation by Robert Small, of the Animal Rescue League, who freed the bird.

Hearing occasional peeps and fluttering of wings, Mrs. Himelblau yesterday notified the rescue league.

Hammers, screw drivers and wire nooses were used in vain by members of the family in efforts to free the bird.

Rescuer Small finally discovered the sparrow huddled against a crack in the wood paneling of the mantlepiece and reached it only after tearing away a portion of the woodwork.

Refreshed by a drink of water and a meal of bread crumbs, the sparrow fluffed its wings and flew away.

CITY FURLOUGH SAVING FALLS SHORT, ALDERDICE SAYS

ECONOMY MUCH LESS THAN EXPECTED

Revelation Made as Kerr Answers Critics by Citing Reductions in Payrolls

Budget Controller Robert J. Alderdice today admitted the city's plan of enforced furlough for its employes thus far had resulted in savings far short of the money anticipated.

Alderdice made his statement as Controller James P. Kerr entered a general denial to allegations of business interests that the furlough system of effecting economies in city administration expenses was a failure because of "cheating."

Alderdice revealed the furloughs had saved Pittsburgh $192,000 for the first four months of the year, but admitted the amount was $85,000 less than the anticipated saving. He hastened to explain, however, that the failure to save the $85,000 was due to deliberations of Council in devising ways and means of applying and enforcing the system.

Alderdice said today that at the beginning of the year 160 policemen and 98 firemen were to have been pensioned, but have not as yet been retired. These departments were late in putting the furlough system into effect.

Fewer men have taken furloughs in the police and fire departments than in other branches, he said. Generally speaking, however, he said the plan is being carried out reasonably well in all other departments.

CITES $607,688 SAVED

Kerr in his denial issued a statement showing that the system had saved taxpayers $607,688.

His statement involved every department and bureau of the city and reveals the principal savings were in the police and fire departments. Business interests, however, asserted most of the economies were effected by wage reductions and curtailment of working forces.

The statements were issued following charges Thursday by the Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the Building Owners' and Managers' Association, who declared Pittsburgh was facing bankruptcy and said unless steps were taken to collect outstanding indebtedness and effect more rigid economies, a municipal deficit of $2,000,000 would be faced. The charge was also made that the proposed plan of furloughing employes was a failure.

REDUCTION CITED

Total salaries paid in the first four months of 1932 were $3,380,191, as against $3,987,580 for the same period in 1931, Kerr said in his statement. The total wages paid employes of the police and fire bureaus for the first four months of this year was $1,491,477, against $1,789,080 for the same period last year, a reduction of $297,633.

Kerr's earlier statement had said:

"In looking over the salary list several days ago I observed there was little difference in the amount paid out this year and for the same period last year. I have asked for data as it refers to the payrolls of the police and fire bureaus, with a view to checking up not only those payrolls, but the payrolls of all other departments."

DELINQUENT BILLS SENT

For the first time in the city's history, Kerr said bills for delinquent taxes were being mailed to property holders in every ward of the city. Yesterday 269 statements for delinquent taxes amounting to $518,328.30 were mailed to First Ward property holders and 288 bills for past due accounts totaling $970,147.04 were issued in the Second Ward.

The bills represent unpaid accounts in 1929, 1930 and 1931.

Further economies in the purchase of materials and supplies used in public construction projects will be undertaken next week, Kerr promised.

PRESBYTERIANS NEAR RIFT ON MODERNISM

Clash Over Church Council Support Looms; Dr. Kerr Lauded for Dry Report

DENVER, May 28.—(AP.)—An undercurrent of controversy appeared at the one hundred and forty-fourth general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, America, today as commissioners attacked problems of organic union with other churches, the fundamentalist - modernist question and problems of social and industrial relations.

The modernist-fundamentalist clash, if one develops, probably will revolve around the question of support and participation in the work of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Some members of the church are known to oppose membership in the council, because of their claims it is too liberal, and two overtures are before the assembly asking the church to sever all connection with the council.

COUNCIL ITEM VOTED

One item in the budget as presented by J. Willison Smith, of Philadelphia, was $14,500 for participation in the affairs of the Federal Council. The Rev. H. McAllister Griffiths, of the Philadelphia fundamentalist group, raised objections. He urged the assembly to withhold action until it considered the two pending overtures.

Griffiths' motion to strike out the item appeared to have considerable support on a viva voce vote but was overwhelmingly defeated on a standing vote which was not recorded.

The budget for 1932 and 1933 was set at $10,000,000. It calls for salary reductions for church workers, effective April 1, 1932. Salaries up to $3,000 will be allowed an exemption of $1,200, the remainder to be cut 10 per cent. All salaries above $3,000 will be reduced a straight 10 per cent.

UNION PARLEYS

The committee on organic union with the United Presbyterian Church of North America reported two harmonious meetings with representatives of the United Presbyterians which resulted in a plan of union.

Applause greeted a report that the prohibition stand of the Methodist Episcopal Church has the unqualified approval of the Presbyterians.

The Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, of Pittsburgh, who represented the Presbyterians at the Methodist assembly at Atlantic City, said his reception there was cordial and that he had assured the Methodists their attitude on prohibition would receive the plaudits of the Denver meeting.

U. P. ASSEMBLY DISCUSSES UNITY

Plans for Great Spiritual Awakening Submitted; War To End Crime Wave Urged

BEAVER, Pa., May 28.—(AP.)—Unity of Presbyterian churches was before the seventy-fourth assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in North America today.

The question of union of the body with the Presbyterian Church of the United States came up with the report of the committee on bills and overtures, which had received it from the unity committee earlier in the week.

The assembly was to recess today, to reconvene for memorial services Monday, when the Rev. Dr. J. J. McIlvaine, of Indiana, Pa., a World War ace in the air service, will speak.

SPIRITUAL AWAKENING

Plans for a great spiritual and evangelical awakening of the church was contained in the report on spiritual life made yesterday by the Rev. R. B. Johnson, pastor of the Fourth United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, head of the committee named by Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, late moderator. Mr. Johnston said answers to questionnaires sent out to more than 1,000 pastors had led him to conclude the church is "sick and anemic" and needs reawakening.

He said statistics showed 12 per cent of the membership maintain family altars, 15 per cent attend prayer service, 55 per cent attend some sort of church service, and 60 per cent subscribe to the church.

The report adopted recommended information from the questionnaires be referred to the board of administration, the election of a vice moderator, the moderator be authorized to appoint a committee of four to aid him in preparing a program of spiritual development, and that a memorial be placed in the minutes to the late Dr. Montgomery.

BUDGET REDUCED

A budget of $700,000, less by $500,000 than three years ago, was proposed for missions and outside activities in the church adgministration report submitted by Dr. A. J. Randles, of New Castle, Pa.

Merging of Christian effort to rid the country of crime was urged by Dr. R. A. Hutchison, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the Board of American Missions, in his address last night on "The New Order."

Dr. M. E. Dunn, of Seattle, in his report on ministerial relief, said that because of business conditions it had been necessary to reduce pensions to ministers and their families 20 per cent. The pension board reported assets of $1,500,000.

The budget for missions was slashed $88,000 following discussions led by Dr. H. H. McConnell, of St. Louis, and Dr. W. B. Anderson and Dr. Mills Taylor, both of Philadelphia.

Girl Who Told Wish To Wed Millionaire Now Engaged

Seven months and 22 days ago, Ruth Gordon, the "local girl who made good," disclaimed any intention of being married, when she appeared here in "East Wind" at the Nixon Theater, unless, she said:

"Well, maybe if there's a millionaire left after this depression—"

Today her mother, Mrs. C. Edward Long, of 723 Wightman street, Squirrel Hill, announced Miss Gordon's engagement to Malcolm D. Hubert, son of Mrs. Charles G. Hubert, of New York. It is not known whether her contemplated marriage will interfere with Miss Gordon's recently expressed intention to study at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. The wedding will probably be in the fall, her mother said.

GIRL'S LANDLADY DEFENDS RECTOR

Impropriety in Visits Denied as Woman's Son Tells Kissing Episodes

International News Service.

LONDON, May 28.—In strange contrast to the parade of men and women who have taken the stand in Consistory Court almost daily during the last two months to accuse him, a witness rallied to the defense of the Rev. Harold Francis Davidson today.

The witness was Mrs. Jessie Walton, landlady of the rooming house where Barbara Harris, 19-year-old tea shop waitress, who has accused the rector, lived for some time.

She was summoned to disprove the prosecution's contention that for three months, "on and off," the 60-year-old rector of Stiffkey Church, Norfolk, visited Miss Harris' room. Mrs. Walton said firmly:

"If I had had any suspicion of Barbara and the rector I would not have allowed them to remain a moment."

George Walton, son of the landlady, reiterated his mother's denials. He said he had seen the rector kissing his mother, his father and his sister. Davidson's attorney asked:

"Did he ever kiss you?"

The answer was:

"He has tried to."

John Beach, an actor, testified Davidson often visited his home, kissing Mrs. Beach "on the check or the side of her head." He said he was neither resentful nor suspicious over such attentions.

TO RAISE FLAG AT FARM CITY

Father Cox anticipates weather permitting that from 15,000 to 20,000 persons will attend the flag-raising ceremonies at his newly-launched farming community—"Coxtown," tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. A patriotic program has been arranged which will include addresses by Father Cox, Henry Ellenbogen, Austin Staley and others, music by the "Blue Shirts" Band, the singing of the national anthem by the assembled throng and the oath of allegiance to the flag as it unfurls for the first time over Coxtown.

Father Cox

Enough progress has already been made on the new project to give tomorrow's visitors a fair idea of what the new community will look like when completed. "Coxtown" can be reached by automobile through either Etna, Aspinwall or Sharpsburg to Kittanning pike.

If you want to help the father of the jobless at a time when he most needs help, at a time when the problem of feeding thousands of hungry men, women and children is more serious than ever, clip the Sun-Telegraph home delivery order blank on this page and send it in today.

In addition to golf and swimming and holiday dinner-dances, Decoration Day week-end boasts of three polo games, the first outdoor games of the season.

Of course you know the Junior League stations for the dispensing of free skimmed milk to undernourished children will be the beneficiary of the game this afternoon at the Pittsburgh Polo Club.

To Play Polo Here

Playing the Pittsburgh Polo Club today is the Hamberg Place polo team, of Lexington, Ky., and Sunday and Decoration Day the Iroquois Polo and Riding Club, of Lexington, Ky.

Social affairs will accompany such a polo fiesta. The largest entertainment to be given for the visitors will be the dinner-dance the David I. McCahills will give tonight in the Pittsburgh Field Club. There'll be 100 guests.

All Have Encouraging Tone Despite Economic Stress; Nominating Committee Ticket Elected

Reports from eight departments, two sub-departments, the School of Physical Education, the current events class and 12 committees were heard yesterday at the annual business meeting of the Congress of Clubs. In spite of economic conditions, all sounded an encouraging note and if, as the official auditor pointed out, the organization is slightly "in the red," it is, after all, only slightly and not unexpected under the circumstances.

The membership committee reported one life member—Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, the president—and Mrs. C. W. Whitsell's house committee report paid a tribute to Mrs. Milton C. Reno, house manager, and her efficient staff.

The nominating committee's ticket, which was elected without opposition, makes Mrs. Florence D. Kinney first vice president; Mrs. S. B. Heppenstall, third vice president; Mrs. R. T. Alexander, recording secretary, and places these directors on the board: Mrs. Paul Diffenbacher, Mrs. George Emminger, Mrs. W. H. Friesell, Mrs. Harold M. Irons, Mrs. W. H. Parker and Mrs. H. D. Stark.

Ralph S. Munn, head of Carnegie Library, speaking on "What the Free Library Means to a Community," discussed it chiefly as an educational factor. He quoted figures to show that the average period of school attendance in this country is seven years, which, he said, "makes us a nation of seventh-graders." A democracy can reach success only if the great mass of people have power to weigh and evaluate the great problems that arise, he observed, adding that in the program of adult education may be found the solution of the problems demanding a high general level of education.

When a group of Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club members went out to the club's social center at Castle Shannon all set to give the folks at the center a little surprise party they found the tables turned on them.

Surprise At Party

The women who have been receiving instruction and assistance all winter from the club had prepared a surprise party for their benefactors.

Although they have only the painest and simplest food for themselves and their families they had managed in some way to get together ingredients for an enormous cake, layer piled upon layer, beautifully iced and decorated with the name of the organization.

Needless to say the club women were touched and appreciative and felt that what they had been able to do at the center had been worthwhile since it had engendered a spirit so reciprocal. Incidentally, the "folks" at the center refused to say goodby, insisting that September will see the club women back at the center.

Shows Spirit

While its work at the center was the club's chief philanthropic project, it was by no means its only one. A contribution of $220 was given to the Mt. Lebanon Relief Association, a gift was also made to the Zoar Home and $400 went into scholarships. Milk was distributed at the Mollenauer School and improved health among the children there is reported as a result.

To close its year the Carnegie Woman's Club heard a summary of the season's work given by Mrs. George T. Sloan, an outline of next year's plans by Mrs. H. W. Mrs. Hinkley and Mrs. William Wrenshall were hostesses at the "Y."

The program, which was also a club product, consisted of folk dances and songs in costume by Mrs. C. K. Emery and Mrs. Robert McMillen and a burlesque, "The False Quest," by Mrs. J. G. Taylor, Mrs. Carl McKee, Mrs. Stephen Faull, Mrs. Bruce Cobaugh, Mrs. Herbert Roberts and Mrs. C. E. Laurence.

PARIS APPROVES THE DIAGONAL WEAVE AND CUT THIS SEASON

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, May 28.—Anything that is diagonal in weave, diagonal in pattern or diagonal in cut has the approval of Paris these days. Criss-cross stripes are a success. They are used for every type of costume; sweaters are hand-knitted in striped patterns, blouses are made of diagonally striped silks, woolen dresses are cut of serges that show plainly their diagonal weave, tweed coats, in plain colors are cut on diagonal lines.

* * *

MANY OF the new dresses and coats are made of vertically or horizontally striped fabrics, but are cut on the bias, so that the result is a diagonal stripe. The whole effect is one of slashing lines, but lines which make the figure look more slender than the old-fashioned stripe which "cut off" one's figure and had a tendency to make it look dumpy.

* * *

LUCIEN LELONG is especially successful with the diagonal costume. He uses diagonal stripes for both dresses and coats, posing the diagonal lines at interesting angles, to get an effect of slenderness. For instance, in his tailored dress (in the sketch) he cuts both bodice and skirt with apex-shaped yokes. At the shoulders, the lines are so placed as to get a widened effect; at the hips, a narrowing one.

* * *

THE SCARF on this dress is cut in one with front of the blouse. It is wound back around the throat, across the back of the neck, then to the front again, where it is tied. There is a matching coat of this same material—which is a deep green-and-white combination.

* * *

THE LUCILE single-breasted coat in the sketch is of black diagonal woolen. It fits the figure closely and is held in tightly at the waist with a leather belt. The simulated bolero terminates at the front with a turned-back collar, trimmed with a new kind of peau-d'ange, which gives the effect of white lizard.

MUSIC

George Junior Republic Benefit
Carnegie Music Hall

The George Junior Republic of Western Pennsylvania gave a benefit concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night, presenting a group of very talented Pittsburghers.

Mr. Lissfelt

Margery Selkovits, Margaret Rae and Marie Vierheller played Bach's Concerto in D Minor for three pianos, a work very close to that composer's heart and one that he liked to play with his two gifted sons, Friedeman and Emanuel. Margaret Rae played the Schumann Piano Concerto with Marie Vierheller at the second piano, and later Margery Selkovits and Marie Vierheller united their forces in Debussy's "Fetes" some Brahms waltzes and Hutcheson's arrangement of the Rakoczy March for two pianos.

All of these young ladies have a most facile technique, considerable force in their playing, and often considerable beauty in their phrasing.

Cass Ward Whitney sang two groups of songs, Hatton's "To Anthea" and Strauss' "Ruhe Meine Seele," also "Zueignung;" later Somerville's "In a Kingdom by the Sea," Bridge's "Oh That It Were So" and White's "King Charles," giving Rubinstein's "Es Blinkt Der Tau" as encore. Whitney is an unusually good interpreter of ballads and always displays a fine warmth of tone in his singing. Hulda Lefridge played his accompaniments.

The Wail of the Big City!

Spring is peppering Manhattan with clamoring curb urchins and gay rectangles of sunlight under the ties of the L. The blunt stretchings of the silver buildings catch the new season's light and shoot it daringly down its terraced edges to the murmuring streets. The transplanted foliage that embroiders the ledges of the repent-houses reflects a fresh vitality and you feel that there must be some one singing within its lofty enclosure. Unchallenged Spring pounces on a receptive city and spreads its gayest carpets. But Spring doesn't enter hearts so easily.

"I want to be alone with my husband's body. Please go out, all of you." A squat Italian woman in mourner's black was pleading with the hundred friends who had crowded into the Second Ave. undertaker's chapel. "I want to be alone with him for the last time." Her face was rigid. Something she had learned from the years of dangling insecurity that comes with being the mate of an East Side gunman. The silent group eased out of the room and left her a solitary figure beside the coffin. She took a step closer and another. Her eyes squinted before the gaudy array of floral pieces. All her days had been gaudy. Gaudy paintings on the wall, gaudy silverware and dishes with golden rims, gaudy French boudoirs, gaudy stationery that she never used, gaudy greetings to guests whose hips bulged with unanswerable roots. "Lasting Life to our Dearest Pal" was the legend on a silken streamer across a rambling wreath of lillies. Another: "To Our Leader, a Man of Courage." In letters a foot high, a garish ribbon vowed that the dead man would be "Missed Forever." She looked them over, one by one. Her man was cold. A bullet had torn his eyes out as he left the swanky apartment of a red-topped moll in the mad Fifties. She had never known her name nor did she care. He had stepped across his 14th St. frontier into dangerous territory. And they got him. It didn't matter now that she had warned him about his infidelities. There was little use in trying to divert emotions of living people. But now, alone in the strangely polished room, she had him all to herself. She took another step and her feet trampled the roses beneath the frame that upheld the expensive coffin. Embalmers had made a hurried attempt to restore his features, but nothing could hide completely the brutal mark of the bullet that brought him down. That brought him back to her. Outside children were playing on the pavements and the rumbling of the downtown surface cars carried a merry jangle in the Spring sun. Directly in front of her was the man she had married in the quaint Sicilian church and nursed through infancy on their steerage route to Ellis Island. That was 20 years ago. Lou, before prohibition and guns. Long before fancy automobiles had replaced the earthy spaghetti and dazzling chorines had ensnared his wife. Her. The chill of her expression left for a moment while she collected herself. A flush of anguish gripped her. "You dirty rat you," she cried suddenly, "you lousy double-crosser."

The Wail of the Big City springs at you softly from strange doorways and crooks you into desperate corners with the force of a fast charging regiment. There was Turtles. A very funny name for a man in town widow. In Pennsylvania she had been engaged to marry with her home. But a coal-dust blast left her and a few hundred others penniless. Miners are poor and a child must help pitifully soon. And a chance to grow away from grimy mine lamps and the heavy smudge that covers everything with rust. So one came to Broadway. Somewhere in the razzle-dazzle of subways purring Rolls-Royces and conquering heroes she would find an income that would permit her to support her mother and son. Turtles found a garret room in an old building overlooking Washington Square. And during the dreary weeks that she sought employment the sun peeped in every morning rather surprised that she was still there. And the moon looked through her windows every night as if to bid her a bon voyage. She even felt the city's south wind scurrying ominously through her mungled domain. And turning her ankle twisting. Then came the job as a hat girl in a cheap 52nd St. clip joint. It meant $30 a week and half of it went with her Saturday letter to Scranton. There was strong consolation especially in the badly scrawled letter that arrived promptly every Wednesday morning from her mother. One night I wandered in to check up on the feeble night life of the tawdry side-show. . . . The dawn-fighters were few, and Turtles sat down beside me in the red-plushed vestibule.

"You know, Mr. Yawitz, this is a funny racket," she stated. . . . "I don't seem to fit in. . . . The people around this place live in the raw. They say the things that come to their minds first. . . . It doesn't seem to matter to them whether you like it or not. . . . These gamblers, beer runners, dope importers. They live like condemned men who have been given a 10-day leave outside of the gallows-room. I've endured it because I've had to. . . . I'm not as happy as that smile on my face when I'm taking your quarter. For a long time I fought with myself. . . . I fought against the invitations to parties that start at 5 in the morning after we close here. A few weeks ago I got my regular letter from mother. She was very ill and the kid was getting hard to handle. That night I knew I wouldn't sleep and so I accepted an invitation. The fellow I went with was a torpedo for an uptown mob. The guy they detail to their bump-off squad. . . . But he was swell to me. I thought it would be a party of continuous fencing with the men. . . . But it wasn't. . . . I was treated like a lady. Even more so than here. . . . I've gotten to like this crazy fellow in fact, I've fallen in love with him. He's helping me in a lot of ways and wants me to bring my mother and kid to New York. He has a mother living in Long Island and she's ready to open her house to them. But I don't know what to do. You see, Mr. Yawitz, I've met a man that would be grand to me, but look at the racket he's in!" Look at his record! I can't reconcile my conscience with his ways. . . . But I know I love him.

The following Wednesday Turtles appeared disgruntled and nervous. For the first time the regular weekly letter from her mother hadn't arrived. The hours dragged. She tried to get Tommy on the phone just to hear him assure her all was right. . . . But he was not there. At 4 a. m. she donned her clothes and sneaked out. When she arrived at her door the phone was ringing. "Turtles, something dreadful has happened," came the trembling voice. "Tommy had been killed. They got him in Mack's speak in Harlem." Turtles dashed to the window. . . . It was spring outside; the sun glittered brilliantly on Washington Arch. A grind-organ was playing Mendelssohn. . . . She stepped across the sill and flung herself out. Her body bounced off a protruding gable and landed in the street. The clanging of a fire-engine in the distance muffled the sound of her fall. . . . The children in the square ran to the fire. The Wail of the Big City blew out of the East River, flaunted a chill across the island, and spent itself in the upper reaches of the Hudson.

Yale Football Marred By Appendix

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It is difficult to determine what Ramon Navarro was studying at Yale, but it took him a lot of semesters to get through. He started from a steel town presumably. Gary, and being a muscular hero he has one rough-and-tumble fight after another under the aegis of Old Eli. In between he also plays football and wins the sweet young heart of Madge Evans, a very pleasant heroine with a very rich father who asks Ramon whether he can support her in the luxury to which she has been accustomed.

Mr. Seibel

But these are merely the outlines of the foundation of the plot in "Huddle," the new picture at the Penn. The gist of the story is in Tony's learning to be a gentleman and a real hero. He had an innate tendency to play dirty football and to invite Madge to shady roadhouses. After having to walk home from a motor ride and getting a very black eye from the varsity coach, he goes in and almost wins the great game in spite of an appendix which bursts in the exciting finish.

Then the freshmen and sophomores are glad to pay two bits to see the hero's appendicitis scar.

It's a rollicking picture in the mood of "Brown of Harvard," with all the activities of college life except studying. No books of exams or anything like that—just processions and Alma Mater songs and kisses and football ethics and appendicitis. Ramon does good work, so does Madge, and Una Merkel is amusing.

So this is Yale!

The stage show is very artistic and colorful, especially a Watteau group in the screen pictures of the Chester Hale Girls. There is some very graceful dancing, and two men do a riotous breakneck adagio. The whole performance is worth seeing, even the interminable semesters Navarro spends at Yale.

Good Acting In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"States Attorney," photoplay feature in the Warner, is made from a story quite evidently written with the single purpose of giving John Barrymore opportunity to "act." And act he does. Excellently. Seldom has he had a vehicle that permits such wide latitude for a display of his artistry in characterization.

The story tends to the dramatic, with the star in the role of criminal lawyer who imbibes too much, but whose brilliance opens for him the way to the district attorney's office, with the governorship a promise of the future. He discards the chance for it in a stirring soul-baring address to a jury to convict a former client of an underworld murder.

Barrymore gains more praise than the story does. And so does Helen Twelvetrees as a girl of the streets, befriended by Barrymore when she is arrested on a morality charge. He frees her and becomes her man, and she is much more lady-like than a society girl he weds in his cups. Miss Twelvetrees makes friends by her depiction of the part.

William Boyd of the stage is sufficiently convincing as an underworld chief, who is the client mentioned above.

'Bugs' Sees New 'Worry' for G.O.P. In Pennsylvania

-By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER-

Now the Republicans are boasting that they have more worries than the Democrats.

Senator Borah is fearful because Mr. Hoover may go antidry. The G. O. P. hasn't got enough campaign money to make a noise in a tin cup.

Borah won't get to Chicago for the worrying convention in June.

Hoover is perplexed and doubtful because Borah has so many presidential bees in his bonnet that his skull is honeycombed.

There is no good campaign manager and the Republican keynoter has lost his notes and forgotten his key.

A lot of prominent Republicans are sore because they are not being consulted and the vice president's sister is liable to make a dash for the wrong chair at any minute.

But they haven't seen anything yet. Wait until Pennsylvania goes Democratic.

Couple Wins $30,000 Award for Injuries

Mrs. Margaret Reynolds and her husband, John Reynolds, of Lang avenue, were awarded $30,000 damages by a jury in Common Pleas Court yesterday against the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The suit charged Mrs. Reynolds was injured in a street car crash at Penn avenue and Butler street. Represented by Attorney H. Fred Mercer, she had asked $50,000.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

THE OTHER night, in one of the private dining rooms in a large Broadway hotel, a manufacturing organization gave a large dinner. It was the usual thing of its kind. A band had been hired to provide the music, several acts had consented to perform, speeches were to be made by the president and various other members of the organization—and a rather well-known comedian had been engaged to act as toastmaster.

The comedian arrived shortly before the dinner was scheduled to begin and went directly to the small room in which the honored guests had assembled. A short man walked up to him and handed him a sheet of paper.

Mr. J——, he cried, on behalf of the entertainment committee, I'm proud to welcome you. I have here a few names of the people you are to introduce and, with your permission, I'll give you some data on each one."

The toastmaster nodded.

"Fine," he asserted, "that'll be a great help. Go right ahead."

The small man looked at his sheet.

"First," he said, "there'll be Homer Smith. Homer's really a card. He loves to play jokes on people—but when the jokes on him, he doesn't like it so much. He's in charge of our direct-by-mail department, and I guess he's all right if you get to know him."

"He'll be sitting three chairs away from you on your right."

The comic rubbed his chin.

"Okay," he muttered, "we'll have some fun with Homer. Who's next?"

The other man smiled.

"Next," he returned, "we have Abe Greenblatt. Abe's in charge of the parking room, and he's a pretty tough egg. Nobody likes him very much around the place because he tries to be tough. Maybe you can get a gag out of the fact that he always beats his wife. Everybody will roar at that."

"I'm sure they will," murmured the comedian, politely.

"Abe will be sitting five chairs away on your right," continued the informant. "And when he's finished, you'll pick on Abner Jolly. Abner is vice president of the organization and he's probably the worst vice president we ever had. He stutters when he talks and he looks to me as though a good bath wouldn't do him any harm."

"Kid him about that stuttering if you can. He'll be sitting three chairs away on your left."

The comedian turned away to hide his grin. This was a fine organization!

"The fourth speaker," the little man went on, "is the most important speaker of the night. You'll introduce him as Frank Hoskins and I can't think of a wrong thing you can say. As a matter of fact, I wouldn't kid him at all if I were you.

"In our company, the name of Hoskins means a very great deal. I don't think the guests would appreciate any joking in connection with that name. Just say that Mr. Hoskins is a grand fellow who is loved by all, and let it go at that."

"All right," replied the comedian. "That suits me. And where will Mr. Hoskins be sitting?"

The other man looked very aggrieved.

"Didn't you kown?" he mutmured plaintively. "I'm Mr. Hoskins." . . .

A TYPICALLY English story arrives today by way of an anonymous contributor. It concerns a Mr. Smith-Farman, an English carpenter who fell into the big dough when a wealthy relative decided that this world was no place for him.

Mr. Smith-Farman would have been more than content to sit around at home with his pipe, his slippers and his baby's nurse. He was a plain man, you see. But with the money his wife acquired some new ideas. She grew very anxious to get into society—even though her knowledge of social customs left plenty to be desired.

Their nearest neighbors were a Mr. and Mrs. Hartt, two products of rare, old, exclusive English stock. Mrs. Smith-Farman knew about them, and it became her one ambition to establish a contact. After inquiring as to the best course to follow, she finally sat down and sent the Hartts the following card:

"Mr. and Mrs. Smith-Farman present their compliments to Mr. and Mrs. Hartt and hope they are well. Mr. and Mrs. Smith-Farman will be at home on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock."

The following day the Smith-Farmans received the following response from the Hartts, who evidently knew their neighbors and their onions:

"Mr. and Mrs. Hartt return the compliments of Mr. and Mrs. Smith-Farman and inform them that they are well. Mr. and Mrs. Hartt are glad to know that Mr. and Mrs. Smith-Farman will be at home on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock."

"Mr. and Mrs. Hartt will also be at home." . . .

HE WAS an aged bum. He stood in the Greenwich Village barroom and talked of the glorious days when he was young and tossed his money around.

On and on he talked. And on and on he drank, as others kept paying the checks. Finally he looked down to find that his glass was empty. He looked around, but no one took the hint. So he summoned the bartender.

"Here, me good man," he muttered. "A bit of service, please. I wish to buy a drink for all these gentlemen."

The bartender waved a hand.

"Go on, you bum," he snorted. "Your credit's no good in here."

The old man stiffened. He threw out his chest.

"All right then, me good sir," he cried proudly. "I will stand for the insult. You buy the drinks!" . . .

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

Three important theatrical organizations have joined hands to "bring back the road." The Theater Guild, the Shuberts and Erlanger Amusement Enterprises are the factors in this new combination, which will endeavor to put its plays on a subscription basis, first in 12 principal cities, and later extend the operation to every important city in the country. Plays of other producers will be considered for place in the subscription groups. This plan has proven satisfactory here, where the Guild has been in operation several seasons, and where the Professional Players (Shubert) already has completed one season of subscription presentation.

Broadway hit its lowest ebb theatrically this week with only 13 theaters open, compared to 19, the lowest point last summer. The greatest depression was during the first days of the week, and the number was shot upward by four openings, but several of the older productions, such as "The Animal Kingdom," are due to drop out of the picture shortly.

Cecil B. DeMille, who used to put so much elaborate atmosphere in regular program pictures that every "party" became a gorgeous revel, will make a fillm of Wilson Barrett's play, "The Sign of the Cross," a story of a Christian girl and a soldier of pagan Rome. It is expected to outshine DeMille's two big pictures, "The Ten Commandments" and "King of Kings."

Jackie Cooper's next picture will be another co-starring venture with Wallace Beery, a drama of the circus, "O'Shaughnessy's Kid," and Jackie has said "there'll be crying in it". . . . Lillian Harvey, who has appeared in a number of European fillims, has arrived in America and has been signed for a long term in Hollywood. . . . Phill Baker, who had to cancel an engagement because of illness, has recovered, and will go to work today, beginning a vaudeville contract of several weeks.

Kennywood Plans for Decoration Day

A display of fireworks will be on Kennywood Park's Decoration Day program. Other features on the holiday bill are dancing, concerts and the women's senior track and field championships, under the auspices of the Allegheny Mountain Association. This afternoon and tonight Art Giles and his orchestra will play in the park's dance pavilion. Tomorrow's concerts will be played by the eDanny Nirella band.

White Indians Live, Explorer Declares

BUENOS AIRES, May 28.—(AP.)—Dr. Donald Wees, American explorer who recently returned from a trip into the interior of Paraguay, said today he would present ample evidence to prove that white Indians exist in the Paraguayan grand desert when he returns to the United States.

His evidence, he said, would be presented to the Harvard University Museum, which challenged his statement as "a revival of an old hoax." It would be substantiated, he said, by many authorities in Paraguay.

Newsy Events In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Mayor James J. Walker, of New York City, is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he faces the Legislative Committee probing into the affairs of officials of the greatest city of the world of which Jimmy is the head. Thousands are shown awaiting his arrival at the County Courthouse and he is given a noisy reception. After his first duel with Samuel Seabury, chief counsel of the committee, the Mayor emerges smiling and stops before the microphone long enough to indulge in a couple of wise-cracks. Then he is shown at Madison Square Garden attending the graduation of 268 rookie policemen, to whom he pointedly remarks that they must expect criticism and that their satisfaction must lie in the fact that a man can only do his best and keep a clear conscience. The current Hearst Metrotone News is on the screens of the Penn, Fulton and other theaters.

FORBIDDEN CITY

The first pictures ever taken from the air of Pekin, the famous Forbidden City of China, are shown. Among the scenes are views of the gorgeous summer and winter palaces of the former rulers, the Temple of Heaven and the Jade Mountain Pagoda. Then there are long shots and closeups of the famous Chinese wall stretching its length over 1,500 miles along the mountainous Turkestan border. There is a graphic description of the flight by the Globe Trotter.

Sensational pictures full of thrills come from Orogrande, New Mexico, where the first armored car squadron and planes of the Third Attack group stationed at Ft. Crockett engaged in a realistic sham battle in the mountains.

Amazing stunts with a bull whip are performed by Leo Cracknell, world champion in Sydney, Australia.

FETE PICTURES

One of the most picturesque of all fetes is the annual dance of St. Vitus celebrated in Echternach, Luxemburg. This religious festival dating back 1,500 years is supposed to drive away all the evil spirits for the year. Young and old alike participate.

Boy and girl athletes in Brooklyn, N. Y., hold an Olympic meet all their own under the auspices of the park department. More than 8,000 participate, and Rosie Feldman, girl champion, tries to make a speech into the mike, but gets mike-fright and provides nothing else but a great laugh.

Elephants trained on the Bernard estate at Nyack, N. Y., perform feats more remarkable than are usually seen in a circus. The giant animals do everything from riding enormous bicycles to playing musical instruments.

Camera Work on 'Rain' Is Under Way

After months of preparation and a week's rehearsal, camera work is started on "Rain," the United Artists picture starring Joan Crawford, which is being filmed in its entirety in natural settings on Catalina Island, Cal. Not a single scene in the drama of the tropics will be photographed in the studios. The Catalina Island isthmus has been transformed into a South Sea settlement, the story locale, a large cast of players and a small army of technicians will remain isolated until the picture is completed.

View Spanish Types For Cantor Film

"Spanish types" by the hundreds are passing the cold, appraising eyes of the Samuel Goldwyn production staff as the new Eddie Cantor musical, "The Kid from Spain," is being whipped into shape for the cameras. One hundred and twenty dark-eyed senoritas, whether they be from Brooklyn or Barcelona, San Sebastion or San Francisco, are to be marshalled as the battalion of decorative femininity.

GEM SALESMAN 55 YEARS QUITS

His 55 years in the jewelry business ended, J. C. Crawford, 70, of 517 Bellaire avenue, Brookline, was on his way today to Daytona Beach, Fla., to live in retirement.

Crawford started working in a jewelry store at 15. His vocation was a matter of chance, he said, explaining:

"My brother was working in a jewelry store in 1877, and during his vacation I took his place. When he returned I got a permanent job and have been a jewelry salesman since."

In all his 55 years in the business, Crawford always has opened and closed the store daily. He has been with three firms, the last being Sipes, at Diamond and Wood streets, where he has worked for 16 years.

Crawford has kept up with the latest in jewelry styles, and says he has owned a dozen watches.

'Two Seconds,' Tashman in Stanley

By EDWARD W. GOSS

Edward G. Robinson in the picture, "Two Seconds," and Lilyan Tashman in a stage skit, are being headlined by the Stanley.

The picture was evidently put together with the intention of showing how well Mr. Robinson can express deep emotions. At any rate there are long spells in the film dedicated to close-ups of Robinson showing him gripped in the claws of anguish, terrible anguish. His face is contorted and his eyes stare.

Some of these "emotional" spots in the picture are difficult for the audience to bear. They come very near to being comedy. It's not Robinson's fault, though. The fault lies in the story. He did his best with a poor vehicle.

Appearing in the picture with Robinson is Vivienne Osborne and Guy Kibbee. Robinson plays a structural steel worker and Vivienne a taxi dance girl who marries Robinson, but doesn't let marriage cramp her style. Vivienne portrays a very naughty girl and does a swell job of it. Guy Kibbee also is a structural steel worker and a pal of Robinson.

"Two Seconds" owes its qualities of entertainment to a rather clever fadeout and satisfying acting by Vivienne Osborne and Guy Kibbee.

Lilyan Tashman does well enough in a short skit. Everybody has heard of Lilyan as the best dressed woman of talkieland. It is safe to assume the lady costumers expect to be made envious by a display of Lilyan's gorgeous gowns. But Lilyan appears in only two "creations." One is an evening gown, and the other is lounging pajamas.

Tommy McAuliffe, the armless golfer, also appears on the stage. McAuliffe receives plenty of applause.

Tom Mix Star In Davis

By MARY SHINE

Tom Mix gets into plenty of trouble in his first talkie, "Destry Rides Again," at the Davis. Tom once more is the fast-riding westerner the youngsters love, with his trick horse, Tony.

Tom is Tom Destry, part owner of a stage coach line, and he has a partner, who turns out to be the very worst kind of villain. His sly leer is worth sitting through the picture to see.

Tom is running for sheriff against an unsavory citizen. Tom's partner is all for Tom's not being elected, so he hires the opposing faction's toughest customers to commit half a dozen dastardly deeds to prevent his election. They finally succeed in framing Tom, who is sent to the penitentiary.

Before going further with the story, it is necessary to introduce Tom's lady love, blonde Claudia Dell, as Sally Dangerfield. Sally's father gets Tom pardoned, and he rides again to avenge himself. He does, and cleans up the gang of ruffians, including his ex-partner, in true western style. Zasu Pitt makes a too brief appearance for the good of the picture, as a W. C. T. U. worker.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Bands playing, soldiers marching, orators orating, telling you it's your duty to "buy Liberty Bonds." Fifteen years later, no bands, no marching, no orators, just a patriotic girl, or a broken piece of human frame trying to sell a "poppy" for a few cents made by even a more unfortunate brother in one of our 55 hospitals. Given 15 years to think it over, war has degenerated from the price of a Liberty Bond to the price of a "poppy." Six millions of these boys' regular customers are disabled this year, too, and from the same war, so those that have, will have to try and make up for these, by buying more. There is only one sure way of stopping war, that is to see that every "statesman" has the same chance to reflect after it's over that these boys making the poppies have had. Yours,

WILL.

Employers Have No Right to Guide Workers' Lives

Has the boss the right to check up on his secretary's private life?

He explains, of course, that he feels just like a father to her, because she has been working for him for over nine years, and he's only advising her for her own good.

But does that excuse his spying on her until 2 a. m., watching who goes into her house and when he comes out?

Does it justify his threat that he will fire her if she doesn't act according to his notion?

The boss himself would like to know.

CONCERNED ABOUT GIRL

"Dear Madam:

"I would appreciate your opinion on the following story:

"A girl, who is now 26, has been working for me for over nine years. She makes her home with her widowed mother, who is over 70 and who goes to bed at 9:30 and doesn't come down again before morning.

"This girl, for the last six or seven years, has been going with a man 12 or 13 years older than she is, but going also with other young men more of her age. Since the middle of last year I have noticed a great change in her, and when I tried to call her attention to the fact that she is getting a little too wild, her answer was that she wanted to live her life and have a good time while she was young, and that so long as her work was satisfactory she couldn't see what anything she did on the outside had to do with her position.

"I told her that I only knew of two kinds of girls, good and bad, and that unless she remained among the good ones, I would have to discharge her.

WATCHED HER HOME

"Not long ago something was reported to me by a friend that I could not believe, and I told my friend so. However, it kept me so worried that I made up my mind that if possible I would find out. So one Saturday I saw her and the man in the case go to a show. Figuring the time they would reach home, I kept watch close on her house. At 11:30 they went in. Not more than 10 minutes later all the lights went out and the shades went down. At a quarter of 2 the kitchen light came on and this man came out.

"When she came to work I told her what I had seen, and her answer was that she had not done anything that she was ashamed of.'

"Now I am not of this generation, and I am not used to seeing girls do things like that. It has me all upset. But I will leave it to the world to tell me whether I am right or wrong in my thoughts. Please help me.

"JOHN."

Are you right, or are you wrong?

You're wrong, John, 100 per cent wrong in both thoughts and acts.

That doesn't mean that I am justifying the girl. What that girl does is none of my affair. She hasn't asked for my advice and I'm not offering it. I'm simply answering your problem, and to answer that is simple.

Mind your own business, and only your own.

HER OWN BUSINESS

This girl's private life is not your business. You can't live her live for her or make a "good girl" of her if she doesn't want to be one. And you have no right to try.

You weren't put here to guide and censor other lives. You were put here to live your own, as finely and decently as you can, and snooping around people's houses to see what they do, while your imagination works overtime, is neither fine nor decent.

This girl is right. Your interest in her should end when her day's work is done. If she doesn't do that work competently, then it's your privilege to fire her. So long as she does, her personal life is her own affair, and it is up to you to keep out of it.

As a matter of brutal fact, I suspect that your interest in what she does is not so high-minded as you imagine. You may not know it, and you probably won't admit it, but my guess is that what ails you is just onery, cussed jealousy. She's worked for you so long that you think you own her, and she'd probably give you the air pronto if she didn't need her job.

LOVE AND TIME

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"We Pass—Time Remains." An old French saying, or was it Latin?

Artists have made pictures of "Love and Death," Struck perhaps to their sensitive souls, by the nearness and the farness of Love and Death from each other. There is the famous one by Watts, too familiar once to be thought of now, of Death, face hidden, heavily robed, insistent, insolent, forcing his way through the door that Love is trying with baby-fury and infant-grief, to hold.

A less symbolical one, less classic, more youthful, more fresh, by Howard Pyle. Two very young lovers under an apple-tree in spring, and hidden in the bloom of the tree, faintly seen but there like a shadow, is Death.

What lover with his sweetheart by an old sun-dial thinks of anything like the end of things for them? He holds his brown hand over the warm pink one of his Susette, and lives for the day and the ecstacy that is in it. So do the peach-blossoms and the spring garden and the thrush on the evergreen. Not until he finds that one knee gives way a bit when he stands up suddenly, and she finds the first gray hair standing like a sentinel among her golds ones, do they think of the inscription on the dial that they read years ago. It said: "We Pass—Time Remains."

Only Cupid is sad when he sees the story they and the old dial make. Not you and me. Nor the lovers. We know and are happy that though we pass, TIME DOES REMAIN, and springs will come over and over again, and lovers, and the birds and the flowers who decorate our world.

Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me the proper form to use in announcing the wedding of a widow who is living in her own home with two children by her former marriage?

The bride-to-be has a mother and father living and family relationship is congenial. They are also in perfect accord with her approaching marriage.

There is to be just a private wedding . . . and the announcements are to be engraved in Old English.

What I am in doubt about is whether the announcement should read:

Mr. and Mrs. George House announce the marriage of their daughter Corrine to Mr. John Murray or whether the bride's name is given in full in this instance, mentioning her former marriage name or whether the announcement should be a simple announcement of the marriage of

Corrine House Smith to Mr. John Murray

C. S.

Especially under these happy circumstances, the announcement should by all means be made by the mother and father of the bride. If at all possible the announcement of a marriage, either the first or the second, should be made by the parents of the bride, and only when the circumstances are not so felicitous as in this case, should the second form, a very "frigid" form, be used. It should always be avoided if possible.

Your first form should be used, but with the full name of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. George House have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter Corinne House Smith, to Mr. John Murray

Double Ring Service

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How could a double ring wedding service be used at an informal wedding when the bride carries flowers, and in the event there are no attendants? How could the bride properly and gracefully dispose of her flowers during the ceremony? Could she lay them on something provided for that purpose, or in what way could that be arranged? M. G.

A small table or stand of some kind might be placed near, so that she could lay her bouquet on this.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Cod Liver Oil and Sunshine Fight Rickets

Every child has a right to a straight and strong body. Children are humiliated and made unhappy if they have knock-knees, bow-legs, enlarged joints or other bony deformities. Such deformities are usually caused by rickets.

Dr. Copeland

I am happy to say that within recent years tremendous strides have been made in our understanding of rickets, and this disease is now of a milder form than in former years. Cases with bony deformities still exist, but they are becoming more rare.

Rickets is a nutritional disease, caused by absence of sunlight and lack of phosphorus and lime in the diet. When lime and phosphorus are deficient the bones do not develop properly. In consequence various body deformities develop, due to the imperfect hardening of the bones.

Proper growth and development of bones and muscles is possible only if there is an abundant supply of vitamin D. This vitamin is found in many food substances, but is very abundant in cod liver oil.

Children with rickets are restless. They constantly turn their heads from side to side. They are irritable, sweat freely around the head and are inclined to refuse their food. Squareness of the head, deformity of the chest, knock-knees, bow-legs and curvature of the spine are seen in early and advanced cases.

A rickety child usually has a "pot-belly," a condition due to muscular weakness. Constipation, nausea and vomiting may be additional symptoms.

Sunlight and cod liver oil are two definite agents essential to the prevention of rickets. Since the ailment may occur as early as the second or third month, it is advisable that cod liver oil be given at this age.

Recently a substance called viosterol has been given in place of cod liver oil. This may be given in drop doses and is tasteless. During the season when exposure to the sun is difficult, cod liver oil, or its equivalent, should be given daily to infants and children.

Whenever weather permits, children should be given the beneficial rays of the sun. If possible, children should play in the sunshine. Please bear in mind that exposure to the sun should be gradual, otherwise there may be painful sunburn. Sun baths may be given to an infant as early as the third or fourth week.

In addition to the many deformities that may result from the disease, children having rickets are extremely susceptible to infectious diseases. Children who have had or are suffering from rickets are prone to develop pneumonia, influenza and other respiratory diseases.

Prevention of rickets is so simple that it is difficult to believe that children can contract this disease. Though in itself it is not fatal, the deformities and complications which result from it are serious. I cannot overemphasize the importance of cod liver oil as a preventive of rickets.

Taming the Rebels

Two men were discussing manufacturing plants. "Do you have many trouble-makers in your plant?" said one. "Yes," replied the other, "there are always rebels in every organization, but I tame them."

When asked "How?" he replied, "I give them jobs which are important and responsible, so far as their capabilities permit."

That man might disclaim it, but he is nevertheless a keen psychologist. He understands why men rebel. When we stop to analyze why children rebel, we can successfully use his system.

For, as a rule, the child who tries to show off, the child who tells whoppers, the child who defies us with insolent insubordination is a child who lacks something. The person who uses obnoxious methods in trying to establish his identity is one who feels that his ability is not recognized, that he is unwanted, unloved, unpraised when he deserves it.

You will find, if you watch it, that an older child will turn rebel when a new baby comes. He feels out of things, unnecessary, unnoticed, inferior; and he will make you know he is there by fair means or foul. So why not supply him with fair means?

There are few people so hardened that they won't come through with flying colors when put in a position of trust—when made certain that someone has faith in them and is depending upon them.

Many a wise mother has made the jealous other child into a trustworthy child by giving him the responsibility of caring for the younger one for short periods. Many a wise teacher has made the class "rebel" a model of behavior by making him a monitor.

A little more praise when merited, a little more faith, a lot more love and trust will tame the rebel; while scolding him, threatening him and punishing him will only drive him farther within himself, and accentuate the feeling of inferiority which is the underlying cause of his insurgency.

Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

An Opportunity Missed

Of the two I prefer a partner slightly inclined to overbid, rather than the one who habitually underbids. If your partner habitually overbids you can underbid your own values, but when a partner will not fully bid his hand it is hard to say how much he underbids, so that you never feel quite safe in overbidding unless pushed by your adversaries. The following hand illustrates a frequent happening, where bidders are unwilling to take a slight risk to go game.

Y chose to make a third hand opening bid of 1-No Trump, because he had a 4-3-3-3 distribution, instead of showing his short spade suit. B passed, Z bid 2-Hearts. A overcalled with 3-Clubs. Although Y held a trifle more than six probable tricks' support for his partner he raised the contract only to 3-Hearts; B passed. Having only a trifle more than four probable tricks in his own hand, Z also passed. Of course A did not make the mistake of disturbing a contract unable to go game.

The opening lead was the 8 of clubs, bringing out B's lone K, and being captured by the declarer's Ace. In itself the fall of the K did not prove that A held six clubs, but it appeared unlikely that he would have bid three on only a five-card suit, so that Z for the moment felt that six clubs should be credited to A.

Before attempting to pull trumps, Z had to provide for future possible discards of losing clubs. With that in mind, Z led his 10 of spades, letting it run, and losing the trick to B's Q. Having no more clubs, B led back his fourth-best diamond. To leave two possible re-entries in dummy, Z put up his 10. A played the Q, and dummy's Ace won the trick. If B had led his diamonds honestly, he had held just four, giving A three. Six clubs and three diamonds in A's original hand left a sum total of four spades and hearts, but as yet there was nothing to show the division between these two suits. Before running off his good spades in dummy, the Ace of hearts was led, to see what fell. B followed with the 6, Z played the 2, and the 5 was played by A, giving no particular information. In all probability, however, A held at least one more spade. If that was so, even if A could trump the third round of spades, it would not cost anything, as Z could save one club trick by discarding one of his two losers upon the spade.

Two rounds of spades were led from dummy, both opponents following. Upon the last one Z discarded one of his two losing clubs. When A followed suit to the third round of spades, his hand was counted; he held no more trumps, and B held the last missing spade. Of course Y's spade was led, holding the trick, and allowing Z to discard his last club. The 7 of hearts was led, thinking that Y might not have re-entry, B put up his K, then he led back a diamond, that Z covered with his 10 and A won with the K. A led a club; Z ruffed; he led back his low diamond, putting Y in, and led through B dummy's last trump, picking up B's two trumps, and winning five-odd. Even if trumps had not acted so well game should have been made.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Cracks and blisters between the toes betoken "athlete's foot" or ringworm, produced by a parasite which is a vegetable fungus picked up at swimming pools and bathing beaches, and can be communicated to members of the family, especially if the bath mat is common property. Best to see the doctor, who will prescribe.

In reducing departments of beauty shops, fat on arms, thighs or hips is deleted by means of diathermy, which is electrical heat. The plumptitudinous one is bedded down under an electric blanket, and does she sweat? She does! Or she sits in the cabinet lined with kilowatt bulbs, looking very much like the living head without a body.

For tweezing eyebrows there are special tweezers with rounded points that catch a firm hold of Mister Fuzzer and uproots him. Before starting the weeding, apply moist hot compresses. The process of arching, under such conditions, will not be tearful or painful.

The fashionable gownmaker builds from the skin out. Go to her for a fitting, and she will insist upon finding out what kind of a foundation garment you wear. Perhaps, before taking measurements, she will take an anatomical survey and suggest a corsetiere to devise a specially-made contraption that will be flattering to the figure, holding in where flesh should be held in, molding the outline to the proper contour.

Fan Fare

Grace Moore has received a pressed orchid every week from an unknown admirer on the west coast ever since she made her debut on that tire program.

June Pursell directs the rehearsals of the string orchestra which accompanies her during her broadcasts . . . Richard Gordon, radio's Sherlock Holmes, says his favorite fan letter is from three girls who teach on an Indian reservation in Oklahoma . . . They take a portable radio set out into the desert, and, with the coyotes howling in the distance, listen to his programs . . . While on their vaudeville tour, the Mills Brothers travel in an automobile caravan, using three cars and a camping trailer . . . The Boswells are planning a summer in vaudeville, but definitely turned down a European offer . . . Vincent Lopez collects expensive books.

Among the voices heard in the weekly presentation of the Ziegfeld Radio Show is that of Helen Nugent, one of radio's consistently popular contraltos. In addition to being heard with Ziegfeld, she appears on a number of classical and semi-classical programs on a CBS chain each week. Dainty Welcome Lewis is seriously considering several vaudeville engagements.

Miss Nugent

Believing that now is the time for a Boob of the Month Club, the Sisters of the Skillet will tally votes cast for the next full moon period. The prize? A flag-pole sitting engagement or a bushel of the Sisters' zipper string beans when they're perfected.

Harry Breuer, xylophonist of the Gypsies, has just written and had published the first solo especially intended for the vibraphone.

Question Box

During the last month I had the pleasure of hearing Ignace Paderewski broadcast over an NBC network through WCAE. Is it possible for you to send me a copy of his speech?—Edward K., Export, Pa.

Copies of radio talks are rarely sent out by the publicity departments of the networks. You probably will be able to get a copy of Paderewski's address by writing to the National Broadcasting Company, 711 Fifth avenue, New York.

P. Waner Sets Record. Walberg, Cochrane Part. Rare Feat by Knetzer. •Gomez Rivaling Grove. Athlete's Strong Finish. Queer Turns in Boxing.

PAUL MAKES TEN STRAIGHT DOUBLES

NOT ONLY HAS Paul Waner played a prominent part in the rise of the Pirates from last place to the first division and pounded his way back to the robust average of .406 to become again the National League's only .400 hitter, but it develops that in his great swatting drive the older of the famous brothers has placed a new world record to his credit. Eleven of the hits he made in his string were consecutive extra-base punches and 10 were consecutive two-baggers.

Paul Waner

Waner's last hit in the game of May 15 was a triple, and then he proceeded to tear off 10 doubles in a row. His two hits on May 17 were both two basers. He made only one hit on May 18, and it was of the same length. He batted safely twice on May 19, each time for half the length of the circuit. The game of May 20 found Big Poison connecting for four safeties, every one of them being a double. No game was played on May 21, and in the first game of the doubleheader on May 22 Paul's first hit was good for two cushions, making a total of 10 successive doubles through a stretch of five games and a total of 11 consecutive extra base hits in a string of six contests. Though they were not made in consecutive times at bat, they represent a remarkable batting achievement for which no parallel can be found in the records.

WHETHER OR NOT Connie Mack blames his star catcher for the disappointing showing of Rube Walberg during the early weeks of the season can only be surmised, but it was considered significant that when the left-hander faced the Yankees the other day Johnny Heving did the catching.

No explanation of the sudden switch in backstops has been given. It is rumored that Mickey Cochrane is no longer to go behind the bat when Walberg is doing the hurling.

PASSING YEARS AND he's well beyond 40, seemingly do not take away any of the pitching cunning of Elmer Knetzer, remarkable Brentwood veteran, who continues to be a slab standout in the minors, hurling for Wilkes-Barre in the New York-Pennsylvania League. Already he has set up a 1932 mark for the younger crop to shoot at by winning three games in four days.

Knetzer started the string with a 1-to-0 victory over Williamsport, in a pitching duel with Chant Parkes. Elmer himself scored the only run of the game in the ninth inning on his own single and Dwyer's triple. The following day he went in and finished a game for Wertz successfully and got credit for the 8-to-7 win, and two days later he traveled the route against Hazleton and won again, 5 to 4.

THE STORY THAT a new Boston syndicate would buy the Red Sox and install Babe Ruth as manager was, of course, laughed down in baseball because right now there is no chance of getting the Bambino away from the Yankees. Col. Ruppert could not be expected to part with the game's greatest asset. But that Ruth will go to Boston as pilot in another year or so may not be a bad guess. At the age of 38 he can't have much longer to go as a player, the success of Joe McCarthy has just about killed any chance the Babe might have had to be manager of the Yankees, and the logical spot for him will be the Hub, where he made his major league start and where an American League build-up is urgently needed.

Vernon Gomez

WHEN CHARLEY BERRY, American League catcher, returned to Western Pennsylvania after the 1931 baseball season to attend to his fall duties as coach of the Grove City College football team, he rated Vernon Gomez as having as much stuff as Lefty Grove and predicted he would eventually equal or surpass the Mackian ace.

Developments this spring have tended to show that Berry knew what he was talking about. The other day Gomez fanned 13 batters in one game to set a season's record, he leads both leagues in strikeouts with a total of 56, and in almost every start he stands out like one of baseball's greatest pitchers.

CATCHER BILL DICKEY'S meat hand was like a piece of raw beef after the game in which Gomez fanned 13. "Gomez showed me more speed than any man I ever had caught before," Dickey said. "He made that ball do more tricks than ever. When he fanned Dykes for the third time, Lefty almost carried me out of the park. Jimmy never even saw that ball."

Dickey marvels as to where the Yankee southpaw gets all his speed. So do all the other Yanks, including Manager Joe McCarthy. Gomez, only 21, stands 6 feet 1½ inches in height, but is frail looking. He thinks extra weight would slow him up. He snaps the ball with a wrist motion that makes his long arm act like a whip, and he follows through with everything he has.

AMONG THE ATHLETES winding up their high school careers in the proverbial blaze of glory must be listed Tom Netherland, star of Beaver High. The second four-letter man at the Beaver institution since Paul Jones was in school, Netherland won letters for himself in football, basketball, track and baseball. An average performer during the season, he saved the fireworks for his final week of competition. He decided that the style he had been using in the shot-put was not right, and changed it without consulting his coach, coming up to the W. P. I. A. L. carnival to make one of the best heaves ever recorded in a big meet in this part of the country. He tossed the iron ball 46 feet, 9 inches.

IN THE POLE vault, Netherland tied for first place at 11 feet 6 inches, though losing the toss for the medal. Incidentally, he holds some sort of record for losing medal tosses. Twice this year he has lost gold medals, once a silver prize and twice third-place emblems.

In his final baseball game for Beaver High, Tom drove out a home run and a triple. This was against the Section IV champions, Ambridge. Netherland is considering entering Pitt next fall and hopes to make Doc Carlson's basketball team before he is done.

BESIDES HAVING THE satisfaction of knowing that they were helping charity with every ticket purchase, patrons were assured of seeing a high-grade polo exhibition in the Pittsburgh club's meeting with the Iroquois team of Lexington, Ky., at Squaw Run Drive in the Fox Chapel district this afternoon, for the benefit of the East Liberty and Homewood free milk fund.

Benny Leonard

The Lexington club is a strong one, and there was a hard fight in prospect for the Pittsburgh riders—Bliss Flaccus, Dave McCahill, Howard Adams and Paul Mazurzan. The visiting players are to remain in Pittsburgh for additional games tomorrow and Memorial Day.

QUEER TURNS OF the boxing wheel will be reflected in the show to be held at the National League baseball park in Philadelphia on June 13. Benny Leonard, who retained the world lightweight championship in 1923 by defeating Lew Tendler before the largest gathering that ever saw a fight in that class, will be boxing under Tendler's promotion. He is to meet Billy Angelo for 10 rounds in the semi-final to the Kid Chocolate-Roger Bernard match. Also, as a promoter, Tendler will now run in opposition to Phil Glassman, who managed him in his fighting days and who was associated with him in business for years after Lew quit the ring.

RAIN FORCES POSTPONEMENT IN SINGLES

PHILADELPHIA, May 28 (AP)—Australia, once the home of tennis champions, faced a hard, uphill fight today to wrest North American zone Davis Cup honors from the United States.

Already defeated in one singles encounter and barely hanging on in another halted by yesterday's rain, the men from Down Under faced the possible necessity of having to win today's doubles match and both of the remaining singles bouts Monday if they were to escape elimination.

SHIELDS VICTOR

Frank Shields gave Uncle Sam a victory in the opening singles tilt by overwhelming diminutive Harry Hopman, Australia's No. 2, by scores of 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Ellsworth Vines tore into Jack Crawford, champion of the Anzacs, and was leading two sets to one when a spring rainstorm halted play after the intermission. Vines ran off the first two sets, 6-2, 6-4; Crawford the third, 6-2, and they were locked in a 3-3 tie when officials waved them off the court.

The first business of today's program was the conclusion of their match, starting where play was suspended. They were to take the court at 1:30 p. m. (eastern standard time) with an exhibition doubles match to intervene before the Davis Cup doubles.

U. S. PAIR FAVORED

On the strength of their showing in singles yesterday, Crawford and Hopman were not seen as a serious menace to Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, America's stellar pair.

After all the things that had been written about him, Crawford's play was something of a disappointment, especially in the opening sets.

MISS VAN WIE TOPS GOLFERS

SAUNTON, Devonshire, Eng., May 28.—Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, who scored a 77 yesterday, added an 81 in the second 18-hole test here today to take a temporary hold on second honors in the qualifying rounds of the British Women's Open golf championship.

Enid Wilson, defending champion, added a 75 to her 79 of yesterday to take the lead with 154.

Maureen Orcutt, American, who paced the field yesterday with her fine 73, had not yet played her second round, but Mrs. Rene LaCoste, of France, who was second with 75, added an 88 to drop back in the field.

Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare carded an 88 today despite a blinding rain to qualify with 168, and Mrs. Opal Hill was safely in the fold with a total of 174. She scored an 86 today. Mrs. Harley Higbie scored a 96 and was on the border line with 180.

Helen Hicks scored 86 for a total of 174, which leaves the American champion close to the qualifying border. Ruth Batchelder, Boston, added a 98 to her 98 yesterday and failed to qualify for match play.

Mrs. William Ferris and Virginia Holzderber, other Americans, who had high scores yesterday, withdrew because of the trying weather conditions.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE BLUSHING VASE—Standing among countless thousands of priceless porcelains, jades and other relics of ancient regimes of the Chinese empire in the Forbidden City, Peiping, China, is the famous "Blushing Vase." During the eleventh century, Emperor Sung ordered his chief potter, Chang, to make a vase so sensitive that it would blush at thoughts of disloyalty by his courtiers. Chang, after many unsuccessful attempts to model such a vase, was advised that only the sacrifice of his own soul could make it possible. Thereupon he deliberately marched into the kiln and perished, the result being that the desired vase was created. The Emperor honored the potter within the vase by creating the vase a high mandarin, and granting it wives and concubines as if it were a living member of the court, and that status has been maintained to this day. I saw this vase only last month, when I was in Peiping, and can testify that it still blushes. Brilliant reds pass through it with intermediate shades of purple to pale blue. It is of the style known as flambe, the glazure of which contains unknown metallic oxides.

BUCS CAPTURE FOURTH WIN IN ROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Victors in seven of their last eight engagements, the Pirates today were sittin' pretty in the first division, out beyond the World Champion Cardinals, whom they used as stepping stones to reach the select circle. Gibby's Crusaders have won four games in a row and in a sense are playing the best brand of ball to be found anywhere in this grand old U. S. A.

Dave Barbee

The Canadian pilot of the Burgos stated this morning he would give the champs another dose of Swetonic, a medicine which the Redbirds have discovered is hard to swallow with any pleasant reactions. Steve, of the North Side, has flipped a couple of three-hit classics against the conquerors of the Athletics and the Native Son apparently is in fine fettle to do his stuff again. He will be opposed by Jerome (Dizzy) Dean or Southpaw Bill Hallahan.

CHAMPIONS HANDICAPPED

The champions, by the way, are playing under grave handicaps. Two of their aces—Frank Frisch and Sparky Adams—are laid up with injuries, the reports on Adams being pessimistic. Back in St. Louis, the little thirdsacker is likely to be out for five or six weeks. Frisch has a torn muscle in one of his legs, but may be able to play in a few days.

The fans cheered the Pirates wildly yesterday upon the return of the hustling club. And the cheers increased in volume after the first clash with the Cardinals got under way. The Redbirds scored a lucky run in the second inning, but Earl Grace weighed in with a homer in the third to force a deadlock, the drive into the rightfield bleachers being a signal for a series of long wallops. The Pirates counted three in the third.

Dave Barbee, the Hercules from Dixie, propelled the ball over the left field fence to open the fourth. This run was followed by two more in the fifth and the Oaklanders added markers in the sixth and seventh.

FRENCH HIT HARD

French was hit hard, but he kept the foe's 14 safeties well scattered. In no inning were the Redbirds able to score more than one run. Jess Haines opposed French for seven rounds. The veteran has not been starting in his turn this year and apparently he has not reached his best form.

Paul Waner went back over the 400 mark in batting and took the National League lead, nicking Haines for a triple, double and a single.

Chillysauce

Keeping up with the Joneses is a simple occupation in keeping up with the Waners, in the viewpoint of the pitchers of the National League.

Jim Lindsey, wit of the Cardinal team, and a right good country pitcher, has a deep respect for the Waners at the plate.

Brother Paul was making a radio talk in St. Louis. The little nipper had a severe cold and was not up to his customary form at the mike. Listening in on Paul was Jim, who noted the deficiency in the Pirate Lindsey listened a few moments and then shouted back at the receiving set:

"I bet a bat is in his hand and make him feel natural."

Larry French is taking pride on the Redbird Larry has won four games this year and each time the winning flock was the victim.

Jim Collins, former Johnstown star who leads the league in homers, missed one yesterday by a few feet when his triple hit the fence to left center.

The Pirates will battle in Chicago tonight. They will meet the Cubs in a doubleheader tomorrow.

U. S. ACES WIN NET TITLE

AUTEUIL, France, May 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Elizabeth Ryan today regained for the United States the women's double title of the French tennis championships, defeating Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall and Betty Nuthall, of England, 6-1, 6-3, in the final match.

Sidney B. Wood, Jr., American champion, of Wimbledon, and second seeded star in men's singles of the French championships, easily defeated the Frenchman, Marcel Combemale, in the first round of title play today, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Motor Club Charts Route to Classic

Only one detour confronts Pittsburghers who plan to motor to Indianapolis for the annual Memorial Day 500-mile automobile classic, the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh advised today. This is on U. S. 40 on the other side of Columbus, beginning at West Jefferson. It is over an all paved road and adds only four miles to the total distance.

The shortest and fastest route to the big auto classic, the club announces, is via U. S. 22 from Pittsburgh to Cambridge O., and U. S. 40 to Indianapolis. The distance is 350 miles.

Mrs. Beyer, Wallace In Tourney Final

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 28.—(AP.)—Spectacular victories in the semi-finals yesterday advanced Mrs. Walter Beyer, of Tulsa, Okla., woman's champion, and Mrs. Tom Wallace, of Sapulpa, three times holder of the Oklahoma title, to the 36-hole finals and they will decide the championship of the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament today.

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP.)—Seeking to enhance his position at the top of the 3-year-old turf division, E. R. Bradley's Burgoo King, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, rules the odds-on-favorite in a field of seven for the Withers mile at Belmont Park today.

Five of the nominees have never attempted to match the speed of the King in a 3-year-old race. The sixth, Walter M. Jeffords' Boatswain, finished in third place, less than a half-length behind the Bradley colt, in the Preakness.

RIBAS SETS MARK

BUENOS AIRES, May 28.—(AP.)—Jose Ribas, Argentine newsboy-athlete, was clocked in world record time of 1 hour 40 minutes, 37 3-5 seconds for 30 kilometers in the Olympic qualifying trials yesterday. He clipped two and a half minutes off the listed world record of 1:43:37 4/10 set by the Finn, Sipila, in 1928, and also bettered the recent performance in Europe of Juan Carlos Zabala, son of Argentina. Zabala was timed in 1:42:30 2-5.

P. I. A. A. TITLE MEET ON IN ALTOONA

W. P. I. A. L. MAY REGAIN STATE BANNER

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent

ALTOONA, Pa., May 28.—The state scholastic track and field championship goes on the block here today in the annual title meet of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association with more than 1,000 athletes representing 88 schools and 11 districts primed for the bidding.

Paul Fegler

No section of the state boasts a stronger representation than the Pittsburgh battle front with Taylor Allderdice, Langley, Westinghouse, Peabody and Perry, comprising District VIII on hand, and the strong W. P. I. A. L. contingent of 17 schools, including crack performers from New Castle, Ellwood City, New Brighton, Beaver, South Union, Ford City, Midland and Rankin, more powerful than ever before and favored to regain the state title it held in 1930 and lost last year to District 1.

EXPECT CLOSE FIGHT

District 1 is back again this year with an eight-team setup composed of stars from Ambler, Haverford, Landsale, Lower Merion, Norristown, Ridley Park, Upper Darby and West Chester. The battle for honors is expected to lie between these two districts. Altoona High School, defending its team championship, figures to retain the title.

Only two of last year's individual champions, Ben Harrison, of Williamsport, 880-yard champion, and Pryor, of Ford City, 220-yard king, are back for competition today. Harrison's way to another title in the 880 is not expected to be as beset by obstacles as that of Pryor, who must beat Paul Fegler, of South Union, P. I. Interscholastic and W. P. I. A. L. sprint champion, who served the Ford City Negro star a pair of tasty trimmings in the W. P. I. A. L. championship meet last week.

Beside Fegler, the W. P. I. A. L. offers two outstanding performers in Andy Lasky, of New Castle, crack discus, shot and hurdle star, and big Tom Netherland, of Beaver, who set a new W. P. I. A. L. and state shot put mark last week with a heave of 46 feet 9 inches.

Howard Spencer, Geneva College's star high jumper, is to give an exhibition of high jumping as part of the program this afternoon.

IN STATE SCHOOL MEET AT ALTOONA

PAUL SMITH

ANDY LASKY

Two athletes who are expected to star in the annual P. I. A. A. state scholastic track and field meet at Altoona today. Smith, hailing from Connellsville High School, is the best scholastic quarter-miler in the Western Pennsylvania district. Lasky is an all-round ace from New Castle High, who was the individual point winner in both the Pitt and W. P. I. A. L. meets. He hurdles and also competes in the high jump, pole vault, shot put and discus, and also is a football and basketball star. These are Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph pictures.

SEEK OPPONENT FOR YAROSZ

Life to Lew Raymond, matchmaker at Meyers Bowl, is just one round of long-distance telephone calls, telegrams and headaches these days as he seeks to line up an opponent for Teddy Yarosz for the main bout at the Bowl next Tuesday night.

Yarosz originally was billed to battle Jackie Fields, the welterweight champion, but Thursday Fields was forced to cancel his engagement due to an injury to his right eye.

Since that time Raymond has been straining every nerve and effort to find a suitable substitute and has combed the ranks of the eligible welters, but so far success has been dodging him very successfully.

According to reports from Chicago today, Dr. Harry S. Gradle, Fields' physician, Jackie will be able to leave Michael Reese Hospital by next Saturday and resume training for defense of his title, June 25, at San Francisco against Young Corbett.

Dr. Gradle has suggested to the champion's management that the coast bout be postponed until the irritation in his right eye, which caused many to fear for his eyesight, is completely gone.

Between Rounds

Johnny Duran, of Oakmont, will turn pro under the management of Joe Jacobs, who also handles Johnny Cooper and Jimmy McVey.

The Twenty-seventh Ward A. C. will stage its first outdoor amateur boxing show of the year at its park, 36th and Fortuna avenues, North Side, next Friday night. Seven bouts are listed. Eddie McEntee has just been elected president of the organization.

Tag Phillips, Bruce Jones, Buzz and Ray Collins will replace Frank Langford in six-round bouts at Bradford, Pa., next Wednesday night.

Wesley Ramey will be Kid Chocolate's opponent when the latter shows at the Meyers Bowl in the number one ring, Monday night. Ramey is the Grand Rapids boy who won two bouts from near Monday night.

L. S. Carpenter, now scaling 132 pounds, and Sailor Gore, 140, both of New Kensington, are ready for battles.

Buck McTiernan is in hard training for the third bout of his comeback campaign, a revenge battle against Tommy Freeman, former welterweight champion, who obtained a disputed decision over Buck at the Meyers Bowl, last spring. They are to meet in the Rinker Park arena, Millvale, next Thursday night.

DUKES TO KEEP HOLOHAN

John D. Holahan, graduate manager of athletics at Duquesne University, has been signed for another year, it was announced last night by Rev. William E. O'Donnell, chairman of the executive athletic committee. Holahan's present contract expires July 1 when the new agreement goes into effect.

Graduate Manager Holahan has been managing athletics at Duquesne University since his prep school days when he was student pilot of football and basketball. Shortly before Coach Elmer Layden came to Duquesne in 1927, Holahan was made graduate manager of athletics.

McGEEVER CAPTAIN

John (Bunk) McGeever, of Homestead, has been re-elected captain of the Duquesne University basketball squad, Coach Chick Davies announced today. McGeever will be a senior.

At a meeting of the athletic council of the University of Pittsburgh it was decided to abolish all minor sports, beginning next September, and to include all sports sponsored by the university under the major heading.

ALL MAJOR SPORTS

Football, basketball, track and tennis have been classed as major sports in the past, but hereafter golf, boxing, cross country, swimming and rifle will be added to the list.

Pitt will enter a full track and field team in the junior A. M. A. championship meet at Beaver Falls next week and in the senior A. M. A. meet in the Stadium June 18.

De Forest Holds Big Lead in Golf Final

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, May 28. (AP)—John De Forest, 25-year-old golfer, led Eric Piddian, his 22-year-old opponent, 4 up, at the end of the first 18 holes of their 36-hole final match today for the British amateur golf championship.

De Forest, a finalist last year against Eric Martin-Smith, had things all his own way on the first nine and led by six holes at the turn. Piddian did not win a hole until the twelfth, when he was 7 down. He won two of the next six holes to cut the lead to four.

The weather had turned bad again, with a cold wind and rain.

SHOOT CARDED

The second registered trapshooting tournament of the season will be held over the South Hills Sportsmen's Association traps Monday afternoon, beginning at 1 o'clock. Special events have been listed for gunners who do not wish to enter the regular contests.

BENEFIT POLO GAME TODAY

Outdoor polo comes into its own in the Pittsburgh district over the present week-end.

A game, the first of a series of three, will be played for the benefit of the East Liberty and Homewood Skimmed Milk Station, under the auspices of the Junior League, on the Pittsburgh Polo and Riding Club Field, in Squaw Run drive, back of the Pittsburgh Field Club, this afternoon, with others following tomorrow and Monday, each getting under way at 3:30 o'clock.

The contesting teams will be a local outfit, representing the Pittsburgh Polo and Riding Club, and the Hamburg Place team, of Lexington, Ky.

The leading local players will alternate in the local lineup. They include Bliss Flaccus, Dave McCahill, Howard Adams, Paul Maguran, George Vang and King McCreery.

On Monday, the South Park polo team will play the Charleroi Robin Hoods at South Park.

A junior horse show for children will be staged at Hartwood Farm, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Lawrence, this afternoon, with proceeds going to the Allegheny County Emergency Association, which also will benefit from the annual Allegheny Country Club horse show, billed at the Allegheny Country Club next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

JONES KILLED AT SPEEDWAY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28. (AP)—The treacherous turns of the Indianapolis motor speedway have claimed another victim, Milton Jones, 38, of Cleveland, O., dying from injuries he received while practicing yesterday for the annual 500-mile automobile race to be run next Monday.

Harold Gray, 24, also of Cleveland, who was riding with Jones, was critically injured. Their car, dashing into the second turn of the track at high speed, got out of control, turned around and slid backward into the upper retaining wall, ripping off 15 feet of concrete railing before falling 18 feet to the ground outside the track.

Jones' death was the second of the training season here this year. Harry Cox, an Indianapolis mechanic, being killed almost instantly Wednesday when the car in which he was riding and which was driven by Benny Benefield, also of this city, leaped the wall on the first turn and crashed to the ground.

Seven more cars qualified for the race, among them one driven by Juan Gaudino, of Buenos Aires, Argentina, the only foreign entrant in the race. Gaudina averaged 107.466 miles per hour over the 10-mile qualifying route.

Ernie Triplett, of Los Angeles, driving a four-cylinder rear-drive car, had the best speed of the day, qualifying at 114.935 miles per hour.

T. E. Miers, general manager of the Speedway, announced today that Monday's race will not be broadcast, the Speedway Corporation and the broadcasting companies having been unable to agree on financial terms.

BUCS CONTINUE MASTERY OVER CARDINALS

Associated Press.

One of the minor mysteries of the major league season has been the ease with which the Pittsburgh Pirates, floundering around in the National League's second division most of the time, have been able to take the St. Louis Cardinals over the traces.

The World Champions won their first two clashes from the Corsairs, but since then victories have been few and far between. As a matter of cold fact, the Pirates have walked away with eight of the last 10 games the clubs have played.

BUCS TAKE FOURTH

The eighth victory over the champions, achieved yesterday by an 8-to-4 count, boosted the Pirates into fourth place, only one game behind the third place Cincinnati Reds. Larry French, hard-working left-hander, whose name has appeared in 14 Pirate box scores already this season, went the route, although walloped for 14 hits.

Meanwhile the Chicago Cubs increased their league lead to a game and a half by beating Cincinnati, 6-4, while the Boston Braves succumbed again to the Phillies, 8-5. The Cubs rushed all their runs across the plate in the third inning, Charley Grimm's homer with one on being the high spot.

George Kelly's second home run in as many days started a five-run Brooklyn rally that sank the New York Giants, 5 to 2, and dropped McGraw's henchmen into the cellar.

TIGERS BEAT CHISOX

The American League schedule was restricted to two games. The Detroit Tigers bunched 10 hits to good advantage to halt the Chicago White Sox, 7-5, and tighten their grip on third place.

The Cleveland Indians battered George Blaeholder for nine hits and six runs in seven innings and coasted to a fairly easy victory over the St. Louis Browns, 6-3.

GENERALS COP DUAL BILL

Clarksburg's fast-traveling Generals won both ends of a double-header with Cumberland yesterday, taking the first game, 3 to 2 and the second, 6 to 3. Heavener's double in the ninth inning blasted the winning run across the plate. The Generals bunched their hits to take the second encounter, and were aided by some loose fielding on the part of the Colts.

At Johnstown, the Johnnies defeated Huntington, 6 to 4, staging a four-run rally in the sixth inning to sew up the game.

Rain kept Beckley and Charleston idle at Charleston.

LOCAL SANDLOT NINES FACE TESTS TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

Dormont, the Homestead Grays and the Crawfords present a quartet of fine sandlot baseball games today, the struggles featuring the weekly Saturday card. Dormont takes on the Canonsburg Gunners at Dormont this evening; the Crawfords tackle the crack Birmingham (Ala.) nine in a double-header at Greenlee Field and the Grays meet the Cleveland Stars at Edgar Thomson Field, Braddock. This contest is an East-West League fray and the Crawford-Birmingham engagement a Southern League contest.

Canonsburg has been without a sandlot team for two years, but Johnny Smittle, former Middle Atlantic League star, has organized the Gunners. Canonsburg always has been one of the best sandlot towns in the tri-state district.

CARD BENEFIT FRAY

Tomorrow the fans will have an opportunity to watch another benefit game at Greenlee Field, when the Lawrenceville American Legion team clashes with the Pittsburgh Cardinals. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock. The proceeds will be given to the welfare funds of the First and Sixth wards.

Monday, the Homestead Grays and the Crawfords will play three games, morning and afternoon at Greenlee Field and at Forbes Field in the evening. Dormont will meet Edgewood, this battle bringing the City League champions into action against the Greater Pittsburgh Elimination victors. The first game will be staged at 3:15 and the other at 6:15. Both frays are scheduled for Dormont High School field.

DORMONT TIED

Homewood upset the dope in the City League last evening by holding the defending champion, Dormont, to a 5-5 tie. In a second City League engagement, Reliance Life nosed out the Geislers, 4 to 3.

Edgewood walloped Swissvale, 12 to 4, in a Greater Pittsburgh League fray, and in the city section, Hazelwood defeated the North Side Civics, 6 to 3.

In the Crafton-Ingram Church League, St. Phillips defeated the Methodists in a well-played game, 4 to 3. Millikens won over Bellevue in the County circuit, 7 to 1. The Books, of the City League, defeated the Canonsburg Gunners in an independent tussle, 6 to 4.

GLASS DOES 10.4

NORMAN, Okla., May 28.—(AP.)—Peyton Glass II, sensational sprinter of the Oklahoma A. & M. College, equaled the world 100 meters dash record in Oklahoma Olympic tryouts at the University of Oklahoma yesterday. Charles Paddock, of California, set the record at 10.4 seconds in 1921. It was equaled by Eddie Tolan, of Michigan, in 1929.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Well, folks, your Uncle Nick has a grand scheme for saving the country. You know the Democrats and Republicans in Congress play a ball game on our Washington grounds, June 4. And as long as our Congressmen are busy playing ball, the old U. S. is safe.

Nick Altrock

It's my idea for the umpire to keep stalling 'em along all summer—and that could easily be arranged if Borah and Huey Long got to arguing on balls and strikes—and maybe not call off the game on account of darkness till around December.

By that time the nation would be on its feet again, thanks to having Congress at the ball grounds all season, and then we could get the League of Nations to draft 'em in 1933 and America would live happily ever after.

SCHOOL GOLF PLAYOFF SET

Sewickley, in Section I, and McKeesport, in Section II, practically secured runner-up honors as the Interscholastic Golf Conference completed its regular schedule yesterday. Kiski and Shady Side had clinched the top honors some weeks ago, and will clash over the Oakmont course next Wednesday for the conference title.

Yesterday Shady Side defeated Wilkinsburg, 13½ to 4½; Peabody trimmed Oliver, 10½ to 7½, and Kiski walloped Carrick, 16½ to 1½. Bellevue forfeited to McKeesport in Section II and Arnold forfeited to Sewickley in Section I.

In the City League baseball chase, in a Section II tussle, Oliver defeated Carrick, 2 to 1, in a nine-inning struggle to effect a tie with Allegheny for the section lead. Oliver collected nine hits against four for Carrick.

This afternoon, Shady Side's baseball, tennis and track teams will meet representatives of University School, of Cleveland. The baseball and tennis engagements will be staged at Shady Side, with the track meet listed for Cleveland.

RAMEY VICTOR

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 28. (AP.)—Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids lightweight, outpointed Santiago Zorilla, San Blas Indian, of Panama, in 10 rounds here last night. Ramey weighed 135½; Zorilla 132.

DISTRICT NET STARTS FACE FULL CARD

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Memorial Day week-end finds Western Pennsylvania racqueters facing busy program. In addition to intensive play of informal nature at virtually all Pittsburgh Tennis Association clubs, specially scheduled hostilities are slated for the Vandergrift, Pa., municipal courts, the Greensburg Country Club, and the Fox Chapel Golf Club. In addition, the Pitt and Duquesne varsity squads will wind up 1932 hostilities by traveling to Grove City and Geneva, respectively, so that all in all there'll be action aplenty today, tomorrow and the holiday.

The Vandergrift affair, billed for early this afternoon, is an exhibition session arranged by P. T. A. President J. Phillips Davis in line with the avowed policy of the local court organization to spread the tennis gospel throughout its newly acquired territory.

P. A. A. STARS PLAY

Fans from Leechburg, Apollo, Tarentum, Ford City and various other communities of the Kiski Valley have been invited to attend the get-together, which will feature a quartet of regulars from the P. A. A. host—Drs. Dave and John O'Loughlin, Jack Lauler, and Sullivan. The O'Loughlins are officially rated atop the West Penn singles list, John reposing at No. 1 and Dave coming in a notch below. Dave, with Dr. Billy McElroy, ranks at the apex of the sectional doubles heap.

In today's milling, the redoubtable brethren will oppose each other in singles, while in doubles Dave and Lauler will tangle with John and Sullivan.

DUKES, PITT BUSY

As the Winged Headers visit Vandergrift, Howard Clark's clever Westinghouse outfit jaunts out the main line to encounter Tack Hammer, Don Snyder and their Greensburg compatriots, while the Panthers move in on the Grovers and the Dukes seek at Geneva expense their second win of the season. The morrow will be given over to general friendly tussling, and on Monday, Fox Chapel will sponsor an invitation field day, in the course of which numerous leading luminaries will cavort on grass.

Indiana Captures Big Ten Crown

CHICAGO, May 28.—(AP.)—Indiana today celebrated its second Western Conference baseball championship, and the triumph was doubly sweet because the Hoosiers had scored the title victory over an old and neighboring rival, Purdue.

Bunching hits off Griffin yesterday, Indiana yesterday defeated Purdue, 8 to 3, in its final game, to annex the title beyond the reach of all challengers for the second time since 1925.

STOCKS HEAVY AS MARKET TURNS DULL

Tobaccos, Utilities, Stores Targets for Pressure; General Electric Down

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP.)—Stocks were heavy in the early dealings today, with pressure directed chiefly against tobacco, utility and merchandising shares. Trading was moderately active at the opening, but grew duller after overnight offerings had been liquidated.

American Tobacco and Liggett and Myers stocks lost 1 to 2 points, while there was a smaller range of declines for American Telephone. Consolidated Gas, Penney, Woolworth, Public Service of New Jersey, Safeway Stores and Coca Cola. General Electric continued to reflect the dividend reduction, dropping a point on the first sale of 10,000 shares.

United States Steel, American Can, National Biscuit and General Motors showed only fractional losses.

President Hoover's statement denouncing "pork barrel" relief prospects of an early test in the Senate on the sales tax proposal and announcement that the Young committee yesterday had discussed "questions of fiscal legislation," gave the nation's financial situation unusual prominence in the overnight news. Also, there was word of further large gold exports and earmarkings.

The Young committee's announcement was vague, but Wall street promptly read into it the interpretation that the prominent bankers and industrialists comprising the group felt efforts to halt deflation and expand available credit reserve could have little if any effect until the budget had been balanced. There have been widespread reports that the committee planned bond market support, but some of its members are understood to have objected to such procedure pending reasonable assurances that the "crisis in confidence" had been passed.

The Senate's decision to give up its Memorial Day holiday and stay with the tax bill gave hope that considerable progress would have been made by the reopening of financial markets on Tuesday morning.

Foreign currencies continued firm against dollars. French francs rose ¼ point to 3.95 3-16 cents while sterling cables were up ¼ cent to $3.69½.

COKE OUTPUT DECLINES

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP.)—National coke production for April was the lowest it has been in any month since September, 1921. Both bee-hive and by-product plants were effected. The former was harder hit, however, owing to a slump in steel production.

Bee-hive production was 56,000 tons. By-product output was 1,883,391 tons. Pennsylvania's share was 368,567 tons of by-product and 45,000 tons of bee-hive.

Options Given to Paramount Officers

NEW YORK, May 28.—The five members of the executive committee and the vice chairman of the finance committee of Paramount Publix Corporation are the beneficiaries of the option contracts for stock approved recently by stockholders, it was disclosed today. Adolph Zukor, John Hertz, Sam Katz, Emanuel Cohen and Ralph A. Kohn are the members of the executive committee, and Sir William Wiseman, is vice chairman of the finance committee. They will participate in the contract under which six blocks of common stock, each consisting of a total of 108,000 shares, will be set aside for subscription at prices ranging from $15 to $32 a share.

Larger Output Seen For Hawaiian Sugar

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—Revised estimates of the 1932 Hawaiian raw sugar production are 1,000,316 tons, compared to 993,787 tons last year.

BANKER SEES OPPORTUNITY IN STOCKS

Wall Streeter Maintains 'Rich of 1935' Are Buying Shares at These Levels.

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, May 28.—When asked who was buying stocks and bonds during these blue days of persistent liquidation, an officer of a leading Wall street banking institution replied:

"The rich men of 1935."

Wall street banks and other banking institutions with $300,000,000 [illegible] are [illegible] the result of the open market credit expansion system of the Federal Reserve [illegible] work. A spokesman for them said that they are waiting for Congress to balance the budget and to make clear precisely how much government financing may be expected this year. He expressed the opinion that assuming Congress will dispose of these and other matters soundly and promptly, there will be a rush of funds into the bond market and into commercial loans. He also expressed the opinion that private investors would follow the banks into the investment market.

Mr. Rukeyser

CLEAR CLOUDS AWAITED

Here is what the banking fraternity would like to see accomplished. It would like the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation broadened especially to increase its loaning limits and to permit it to make loans for new construction. It would also like the corporation to give special attention to rehabilitation of railroad credit including making advances to carriers to permit them to acquire their own bonds at prevailing depressed prices so that they could retire them and reduce their fixed charges. To the extent that such an operation would be carried on the carriers would also be substituting private debt with public debt, but the bankers feel that when normal conditions are restored the railroads could finance themselves in the open market in order to repay the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Bankers would also like to see the Reconstruction Finance Corporation make advances to the carriers to meet their fixed charges.

They contend that such bolstering up operations would raise railroad bond prices and would also greatly improve the position of banks and insurance companies holding railroad bonds. After such operations the bankers feel that the stronger carriers could borrow in the open market to carry on job-creating maintenance of way and maintenance of equipment expenditures. A survey among industrial corporations has indicated that numerous companies will be ready to release capital expenditures as soon the clouds clear.

MARKET DISTORTED

As for public works, the street is eager to see advances to states and municipalities made through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation instead of direct by the federal government itself. It has been suggested that the corporation might offer to underwrite issues which it approves. With such an O. K., the open market might absorb the bonds as it has done in the case of intermediate credit bonds, which were so underwritten. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation did not have to put up a dollar for such bonds which otherwise could not have been marketed.

Federal Reserve aggressive open market operations have distorted the market for government bonds, putting short term issues which it has favored at a disproportionately high price as compared with longer term issues. Perhaps by taking on some of the less short term issues, the Federal Reserve will iron out these differences. The present policy of the Federal Reserve is to keep the excess reserves of member banks at the present level rather than to increase it further or to decrease it.

OIL AGREEMENT DENIED

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP)—C. E. Arnott, president of the Socony-Vacuum Corporation denied today an agreement had been reached between the American-European and Russian oil executives now conferring here in search of stabilization of world oil export markets.

In outline the supposed agreement proposed that the American-European group guarantee a market for the next 10 years for an annual Russian export quota of about 5,300,000 tons, her actual export in 1931 said to be about 10 per cent of all the oil in the export market. The American-European group was said further to have guaranteed to buy extra oil from Russia if consumptive demand should increase. The amount of money that would accrue to the Russians for their oil would run about $65,000,000 a year on the basis of the 1931 prices, an average of which was said to have formed the basic price in the agreement. Principal interests at the conferences are Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony-Vacuum Corporation, Dutch-Shell interests of Europe, Gulf Oil, Consolidated Oil and Soviet Russian interests.

European Power to Draw on Gold Stocks Is No Longer Great

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES no longer are in a position to seriously menace American financial affairs by a further flight from the dollar. Other nations undoubtedly could cause temporary embarrassment to our Federal Reserve System by sudden withdrawals of gold but the amount which they could take out of this country is not large enough to greatly disturb the United States.

Some compilations made by Poor's Service indicate the radical change which has taken place in our relationship to other countries so far as possible gold withdrawals are concerned.

The survey declares that European investments and balances in the United States have been reduced to a point where if foreigners should cash in all their remaining balances and sell their remaining securities the entire proceeds would not amount to more than one and one-quarter billion dollars against the four and one-quarter billions that now constitute Uncle Sam's gold stock.

Entire Amount Could Not Actually Be Taken

THE FIGURE GIVEN above is a theoretical one. In actual practice it would be impossible for other countries to withdraw the entire amount. The needs of commerce make it necessary to retain at least some balances here. In discussing this Poor's Service says:

"The total of $1,250,000,000 which foreign nations might theoretically withdraw by cashing in all the obligations of the United States that they possess is a maximum and represents the outside limit of European ability to draw gold. On a strictly practical basis it is doubtful if Europe is in a position to draw more than a very few hundred millions more from our gold stock."

Security Values Greatly Reduced

LAST MARCH Poor's estimated that European holdings of securities in the United States amounted to $1,150,000,000. This did not include German holdings which are impossible to estimate and which would be unlikely to be transferred home until German domestic difficulties are settled.

Since that time there has been a very substantial decline in the market prices of securities including drops of over 40 per cent cent in average industrial stocks, even larger declines in railroad stocks and smaller, although substantial declines in bonds. In addition, apparently there has been a substantial amount of liquidation of securities from Europe, so that it is probable that within the last three months the potential liquidation value of European securities' holdings in the United States has been cut down by about 40 per cent. On this basis, the present value of such European holdings of all United States stocks and bonds at current market prices is probably well under $700,000,000.

In explaining the method by which its estimate was established, Poor's says:

"If Europe should persist in continuing to liquidate these securities the market prices would be bound to shrink further in the process and it is doubtful if European holders would be able to realize more than $500,000,000 for their present holdings of American securities. If we add to this the $750,000,000, estimated as the total of European balances and holdings of short-term bills and ear-marked gold in this country, we get a total of about $1,250,000,000 as representing the extreme limit of Europe's present ability to draw on the United States even if she liquidated all her balances here and sold out all her American securities. As a matter of fact, of course, Europe is not likely to do anything so extreme."

New Bond Offerings Still at Low Level

NEW YORK, May 28.—New bond offerings this week aggregated $18,068,950, compared to $17,236,000 last week and $92,554,000 in the like 1931 period.

SUGGEST NEW LOAN BASIS

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(INS)—Revision upward of the loan value of recognized stocks and bonds in order to release a portion of the billions of dollars in credit made available by the government and Federal Reserve system was suggested in official circles here today as a method of breaking the cycle of deflation.

There was a possibility that the New York committee headed by Owen D. Young, the Avery committee in Chicago and similar organizations to be set up in other Reserve districts may consider such a plan.

Due partially to the economic fear-psychology that has gripped the country, resulting in widespread loss of confidence, the quoted values of many stocks and bonds are considered below their intrinsic worth. The new values would be fixed on the intrinsic worth. Use of a higher-than-quoted valuation on sound securities is not without precedent. Comptroller of the Currency J. W. Pole, more than a year ago, notified national bank examiners that national banks would be permitted to retain at virtually face value securities that had depreciated according to market quotations. This ruling applied only to securities of recognized intrinsic value.

NAVY LETS BIG OIL CONTRACT

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(INS)—Contracts for the supply of fuel oil totaling approximately 1,000,000 barrels, for a total of $869,450, were awarded yesterday by the Navy Department.

Of this amount 707,400 barrels were of grade A fuel oil, 260,000 barrels grade C and 43,500 barrels fuel oil for Deisel motors.

All the supplies were for Navy services on the east coast. The successful bidders and amounts (in barrels) were: Colonial Beacon Oil Company, Boston, 125,000 grade A, 20,000 grade B and 15,000 for Deisel motors; Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, 155,600 grade A, 115,000 grade B, 4,500 for Deisel motors; Gulf Refining Company, Pittsburgh, 300,000 grade A, 50,000 grade B and 4,000 for Deisel motors; Atlantic Refining Company, Philadelphia, 126,000 grade A; Magnolia Petroleum Company, Dallas, 30,000 grade C, and Continental Oil Company, New York, 20,000 for Deisel motors.

Middle West Note Committee Formed

CHICAGO, May 28.—(AP)—Five committees have been formed to protect the vast interests of stock and note holders in the federal receivership of the Samuel Insull-controlled Middle West Utilities Company.

The newest is a committee composed of owners or representatives of holders of $4,000,000 in Middle West serial convertible gold notes. Its organization under chairmanship of Charles S. Dewey, vice president of the Colgate - Palmolive - Peet Company, was announced yesterday.

General Electric Cut 'Bolt From the Blue'

NEW YORK, May 28.—(INS.)—The General Electric dividend reduction was one of those bolts from the blue, and the new decline in the market was a natural development. Fresh liquidation was touched off and, all in all, stocks put up another sorry exhibition.

Wall street is in the frame of mind of not knowing what to expect next. Nothing has developed in Washington, though the tax outlook is better. So the only thing to do is to stand aside.

The big hope now is a break in the news, for the way the market was going at the close indicated further liquidation was being touched off.

The financial community has reached the point of where values just don't exist any more.

Which makes the parallel with the 1929 bull days exactly 100 per cent. Then every stock was going to 1,000; now there are few issues that aren't being relegated to the "wallpaper" class. Naturally this can't last for the past shows that every crisis brings its own leader and cure.

The big need now is for the nation's leaders to do a few simple things. This means not only Congress, but the banking element as well. Reports were current of a moratorium in Central Europe over the week-end. The effect will be problematical, since it has been anticipated for months.

The wheat situation still has possibilities. If the Farm Board gives the Red Cross 40,000,000 bushels more, it will only have about this amount left, thus removing the big overhanging factor on wheat prices.

Erie Road to Get Loan of $2,775,000

WASHINGTON, May 28 (INS.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission has approved the application of the Erie Railroad controlled by Van Sweringen interests, for a 3-year loan of $2,775,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Fire Brick Prices Are Cut $3 a 1,000

NEW YORK, May 28.—First quality fire clay brick and silica brick have been reduced $3 per thousand to $35 effective immediately, according to the Daily Metall Trade.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY :-: :-: By ANTHONY ABBOT

Actor, Claiming Innocence, Says Authorities Are Persecuting Him

CHAPTER XLV

"But who did it? Who was the concealed assassin? Solve that—and the case is closed. We must begin with Christine, because she was the first. Who killed Christine Quires?"

Mrs. Edgar Quires nestled against her husband, her face white with horror, her eyes bulging. The man himself was even paler than his wife, and his hands, patting her shoulder, were twitching.

"Is it not true," demanded Dougherty, "that this assassin could have got into the apartment, killed Christine and escaped scot-free before our party ever reached here?"

"That is true," answered Thatcher Colt. "On the other hand, the same person could have remained to kill Lola if the hiding place were secure."

Guy Everett turned his face toward the mantel, buried his face in his arms and suddenly burst into tears.

But the district attorney had not reckoned on his man. Guy Everett made his living by his emotions and their proper display. Sensing the approach of the enemy, for Dougherty had taken little pains to disguise his distrust, Everett suddenly backed from the fireplace and lifted his hands tragically above his head.

CLAIMS INNOCENCE

"You are persecuting me!" he cried, his fingers dancing like flames and his eyes burning with fright. "You are trying to prove that I did it. You want to send me to the electric chair. I didn't do it. I tell you—I didn't do it!"

"Then what are you worried about?" rasped Dougherty.

"You've got to have a victim! And you think I'm the weakest link in the chain!"

"Don't try to bluff me," snarled Dougherty. "You've been lying ever since we got hold of you. Now you see what a bad spot you're in. It looks like you killed Christine Quires. That's bad enough. But it looks worse than that—it looks like you hung around afterward and killed Lola too. Hell, they'd put you in the hot seat twice for all that!"

"I didn't," moaned Guy Everett. "I killed no one!"

"You were blackmailed by Lola and she ruined you. She got all your money away from you. You blamed Lola and Christine too. You even had accomplices here!"

"Accomplices!" gasped Everett, in his best second-hand manner. "By God, sir—be careful what you say!"

PAID FOR REPORTS

"You paid money to Eunice, didn't you?" purred Dougherty with a wide opening of his eyes at Thatcher Colt and Flynn.

A look of helpless horror crossed the actor's face.

"I may have tipped her—I told you all about that—"

"You paid money to Eunice to keep a watch in the house for you and report to you what was going on. And we got that out of Eunice this morning. And she told us just where you met her on the outside, to get your reports. And that's how you found out that Christine Quires made fun of you to Lola and 'that's why you hated Christine.' Is that true or ain't it?"

Desperately Guy Everett fingered his pockets for a cigaret. He did not find one.

Try one of these," invited the Commissioner in friendly tones. The actor gave Colt a queer glance of suspicion. Was this another police dodge to trap him? But Colt was smiling good-naturedly.

"I am afraid we are a little premature, Dougherty," he remonstrated amiably. "The trouble with Mr. Everett is that he has not really told us the truth. We want to know where you really were, Mr. Everett, during the time when you said you were in that speakeasy."

Colt's cigaret between Everett's lips seemed to act as a magic talisman. The man looked haggardly at the commissioner and said:

"I have been afraid to tell!"

"But now?" prodded Colt.

"I will tell you everything. I was with Dr. Baldwin's wife!"

VISITED MRS. BALDWIN

Why did you go to the home of Mrs. Baldwin?" asked Colt incisively.

"Because I was desperate," answered Everett with a shake of his head. "I had been a victim of Lola Carewe. From what Christine had told me, I realized at last that she, too, had been a victim. And I gathered that Dr. Baldwin was another. I had no practical scheme. But it did seem to me that if all of us who had been fleeced by that woman could get together there might be some hope of forcing her to give us back our money. So I drove from here up to Mrs. Baldwin's apartment and told her what had happened to me, and that I knew her husband had also been fleeced. Please do not think me too much of a cad. I did not reveal anything to her. I went there to talk to Baldwin himself—but from her talk, I soon learned that she was fully aware of the situation."

Mrs. Baldwin nodded solemnly.

"Every word he says is true," she declared. "He lied only to protect me. But it wouldn't be fair—"

"Too bad you didn't tell us this last night," grumbled Dougherty.

But Colt was going forward.

"Now," he resumed thoughtfully, "I would like to return to our reconstruction of the crime. We have shown how Christine Quires could have been killed. But I would like to pass on from the first murder to the second—the murder of Lola Carewe."

Here the Commissioner turned and looked directly at Vincent Rowland.

"Mr. Rowland," began Thatcher Colt. "I sent you this afternoon a transcript of the last letter known to have been written by Dr. Baldwin."

"I have read it carefully," Rowland assured him in a mincing voice.

"Have you any answer to make to those charges which he levels against you?"

Vincent Rowland stirred restlessly and then stood up, as if preferring to meet his inquisitor on his feet.

"There are no charges there," he replied with a decisive tug at his chin-whiskers. "There are only suspicions. The time has come for frank speaking. I have felt since last night that it would come. I have prepared myself to meet it. The fact is that I, too, was a victim of Lola Carewe. But, if I do say so myself, I was a victim after a different fashion. I met her, you see, because I was a friend of her husband. She affected to rely on me. She asked me to be her financial adviser. I knew that her husband had lost his fortune and that she had only his insurance—but that amounted to more than a half a million, so there was no real mystery about where Lola's money came from—and I felt pleased to guide her in her investments. You may know that I have always been a consistent foe of fake brokerage houses. In this way I became an expert in the knowledge of their tricks. Lola made me tell her endlessly about these tricks. I did not know until recently that she was putting them into practice, and secretly getting money from her men friends in this way. We had many bitter quarrels on the subject. But by this time I discovered that Lola had a hold on me greater than I had dreamed. She had become aware of some of my personal concerns which, indiscreetly, in idle moments I had blabbed to her. Now she could—and did—blackmail me. But only temporarily. I had fully resolved to crush her in her own scheme. Consequently I pretended to be friendly with her still, and take her around places, but I was weaving a net as only a skilled attorney can, and in the end I meant to crush her. But suddenly all that was unnecessary."

(To Be Continued Tuesday.)

A look of helpless horror crossed Everett's face.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Veritzen's Reaction to Story Is Surprising

I had not realized until the words were well out of my mouth how absolutely ungracious my question must appear to Phillip Veritzen, even though I had qualified my rudeness by telling him that I did not wish to appear ungracious.

"I am sorry," Mr. Veritzen said in his most icily courteous manner, "that I have transgressed so flagrantly upon your good nature. Will you please consider the request withdrawn?"

"Indeed, I shall do nothing of the kind," I said warmly. "It is I who should ask forgiveness. I have been unconscionably rude, but please do not believe that my hospitality is at fault. My attitude is simply an aftermath of that discussion we had concerning Noel and Mary and Miss Arlen. I suppose I am so subconsciously loyal to Mary that I am prone to twist even a natural request like yours into some overt or covert design against her. Please forgive me and remember that you, yourself, gave me some justification for my attitude in the last conversation we had upon the subject."

"I really do not see," he began stiffly, "why you should read any such meaning into a simple request made to you as one of my best friends on account of the widow and daughter of the oldest and nearest business associate and personal friend I ever have had or ever expect to have."

TELLS ABOUT CHINESE

"But I don't read anything like that into it now—" I said emphatically, devoutly hoping that the recording angel and his pencil had business in China or Kamchatka. "Won't you please be big enough to forget that unlucky little speech of mine and let me assure you that as soon as I can clear my house of its present spectacular occupants, I shall be delighted to do anything in my power for your friends?"

His face cleared miraculously.

"But, tell me," he went on, "what you mean by 'clearing your house of its present spectacular occupants?'"

"It's a long story," I said, settling to the narrative, for I had decided that I would tell him of the presence of the wounded Chinese in our house and, of course, of the reason for his being there. I knew that the term "soul of discretion" could be applied to him, and remembered several occasions in which he had shared perilous and dramatic moments of our lives. He was entitled to know the story, and forthwith I told it to him in detail, not omitting the legacy to Marion of the secret lockbox which appeared to be the cause of all the trouble. I kept back only what Lillian had told us of her suspicion that the activities of Marion's father and Samuel Brixton in China during the Boxer rebellion and the subsequent looting had something to do with the siege which the mysterious Chinese were laying to the house.

FIT FOR MELODRAMA

"What wonderful old hokum it all is!" he exclaimed, his eyes sparkling. "All the good old stuff but with enough of a novel slant to make a splendid melodrama. For, of course, to anyone who knows Lillian's history, the solution is plain. You probably have deduced it already, only you don't want to tell me about it because you're not sure of how much I know. You probably know Lillian's first husband, Tom Morton, as thorough-paced a scoundrel as ever was permitted to breathe free air, was in China during the Boxer rebellion. If he left anything alone that wasn't buried beneath immovable granite, it was because somebody else had not overlooked that particular loot. The answer is simple. There's something mighty valuable in that box which either belongs to these Chinese or is coveted by them. It's regular 'Moonstone' stuff, with enough of a different angle to make it usable. I think I'll have to commission you to do something on it when we finish our present task. Lillian ought to be able to give you a great deal of background. What do you think?"

Was he serious? I wondered, or was he simply amusing himself at my expense? I tried vainly to read his meaning in his facial expression, but his brilliant eyes and his poker face gave me no clue to his real thoughts. But I hoped sincerely that "the spirit, sir, was one of mockery."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Today the meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club were taken up largely with the activities that will be scheduled to take place at the picnic which will be held at Kennywood Park on July 14. Each child who attends the regular meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club starting next Saturday will receive a strip of three tickets good on the amusement devices at the park. Special games and stunts will be arranged for the members of the club for this day.

Earl Rosser, new manager of the Cameraphone Theater, speaking of the Junior Komic Club, had the following to say:

"The secret of success of these meetings is not only the screen show that we furnish for the club members and the entertainment that we create from their own membership, but more largely in the friendly contact of the manager with the members of his chapter.

SHOULD BE FRIENDS

"It is well to know every one of them by their first name and know them so well that, if necessary, a kindly corrective word will help to make them better boys and girls. I don't mean by this statement that the rank and file of our club membership is other than everything you could ask in youth, but occasionally a boy will get a little rough or boisterous, and if his attention is called to it in a friendly way it doesn't happen again.

"I get more real human enjoyment out of my Saturday morning meetings than I do out of all of my work for the entire week. To me it is a duty to create the friendship and confidence of these youngsters, so that from week to week they will be looking forward for the regular Saturday Junior Komic Club meeting."

FOURTH MEETING

Earl, who held his fourth Komic Club meeting today, is very enthusiastic about the club, and the children of this theater are fast learning that he does everything in his power to see that they have a good time and enjoy themselves at these Saturday morning meetings.

Tomorrow the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will contain a cutout picture of "Slivers," the funniest of funny men. Be sure to cut him out and add him to the other circus cutouts you now have, because no circus would be complete without the circus clown. Have your crayons or paints ready to color "Slivers" and see for yourself just how funny you can make him look.

Remember, too, Uncle Bob and Betty, who are honorary members of your club, will read you the Sun-Telegraph Comics tomorrow at 12:30 noon, from radio station WCAE—Voice of the Sun-Telegraph.

"It is true that normal people are contented, and only worry about food, shelter and raiment. That's why normal people are dull—their ductless glands work in simple harmony. When ductless glands function normally, the human being becomes discontented and displays talent or genius for removing the causes of discontent."—Dr. Crocus, psychiatrist.

Building Operations

Pittsburgh Needs Sanitary Houses for the Poor—Brief Comment on Local News Items

The Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry reports that building operations in Pittsburgh last month were 91.8 per cent lower than in April, 1931. Yet there is need for new houses, especially low priced dwellings. The prices of building materials are exceptionally low and wages in the building trades have been reduced. What a pity that advantage is not taken of these opportunities!

The need of sanitary houses for the poor is pointed out in a report just issued by the Pittsburgh Housing Association. It is not pleasant reading, for it tells, without mincing words, of the squalor and congestion of the slums. One house is mentioned which contains 13 rooms, occupied by 10 families, of whom two live in the cellar. There are other cases, too, almost or quite as bad.

Health and morals suffer when people are forced into overcrowded houses, to live like pigs. The conditions described by the Housing Association are a menace not only to the slum dwellers but to the whole city. The association suggests that maintenance costs for dwellings be included in unemployment relief disbursements, but that raises some other questions.

A regrettable feature of the building situation is that not only has the building of homes been curtailed but construction of public buildings has also dropped. The Board of Education announces, for example, that it will have to suspend its building program, because it cannot go ahead with it without increasing the school tax on real estate.

The decline in building operations is especially serious to Pittsburgh because many local companies are engaged in the manufacture of building materials, such as iron and steel, brick, aluminum, glass and hardware, and they and their employes suffer, as well as the building contractors and the workmen of the various building trades.

Building operations no doubt would pick up in Pittsburgh if the banks and building and loan associations would extend credit more freely. But until confidence returns the best hope for the building industry and the manufacturers of builders' supplies lies in the proposed public works to be constructed by the federal government with the proceeds of a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan.

Work is to start Monday on the erection of a new dam in the Ohio River near Beaver, to cost $1,625,000. And Army engineers have included other Ohio River improvements to cost $10,650,000 and Allegheny River jobs to cost $5,825,000 in a public works program. But the program does not go far enough. It should include the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal and flood prevention reservoirs.

The State Highway Department, forced to economize by the falling off in motor revenues, has shown ingenuity in the erection of a temporary bridge for pedestrians only, across the Kiskiminetas River at Vandergrift, by constructing it of pontoons, empty steel oil drums securely lashed together with steel cable, and surmounted with heavy planking and side rails. It is the first pontoon bridge the department has erected, but is working so well that others may be constructed.

Pittsburghers who plan to take a motor trip over Memorial Day can hardly do better than follow the advice of the Pittsburgh Motor Club and visit Gettysburg. It is a delightful ride, and Gettysburg and the battlefield, always interesting, and especially so on Memorial Day, will offer some unusual attractions this year in Gettysburg College's centennial exercises.

When the Confederates invaded Pennsylvania the students at Gettysburg College deserted their classes and rushed to enlist. The incident, one of the most dramatic and at the same time one of the least known of the Civil War, will be commemorated Monday. The Federal Government will unveil a tablet on the college building known as "Old Dorm."

There will be eminent men among the Memorial Day speakers at Gettysburg—which brings to mind Lincoln's speech there. The battle and the Lincoln address make this holy ground. No patriotic Pennsylvanian can fail to be thrilled by the emotions that will be aroused by a visit to the scene of such momentous events.

A stirring picture of a cavalry charge at Gettys- burg—a picture suitable for framing—will be presented tomorrow in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Portraits of Col. James M. Schoonmaker (a colonel at 20) and other local heroes of the Civil War also will be given. There will be more photographs of high school graduating classes, too.

To those who spend the week-end and Memorial Day in visits to Pennsylvania's woods and streams a word of caution is in order. The spring forest fire season is about over, but Chief Forest Fire Warden George H. Wirt reports that some of the forest areas are still inflammable. Be careful with campfires and cigarets. Forest fires devastated 40,000 acres of Pennsylvania timber land this spring.

Dr. E. M. Gress, State Botanist, also has a word that week-end visitors to the country should heed. He says that some of the world's most beautiful flowers grow in the Pennsylvania mountains but that some of them are rapidly being exterminated because of the eagerness with which they are plucked by autoists. Spare the flowering dogwood, the azaleas, the mountain laurel, the rhododendron, that others may enjoy them.

The Sun-Telegraph will present in the "March of Events" Section tomorrow the first of a series of important articles showing how American industry is "fighting back to prosperity." The article is by Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and tells many things about the Pennsylvania's plans which every Pittsburgher should know.

The Sun-Telegraph is preparing to offer its readers some entertaining new fiction of the kind that one especially enjoys reading in hot weather when pleasure rather than hard thinking is sought. The first of three serials, "The Caliater Treasure," by Roy Vickers, starts tomorrow in the American Weekly, which is distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The other two will start shortly.

The Fable of the Foolish Farmer

(Copyright, 1932.)

Once there was a Foolish Farmer who set out to water his stock.

There was plenty of water in the well, the pump was in good working order, but the stock went dry because instead of using the two good pails that stood by the well this farmer, in his folly, tried to fill a pail that was so full of holes it was a sieve.

And even when he saw that the pail he chose would not hold water the Foolish Farmer stubbornly refused to use the two good pails, and the stock bawled and bawled and stayed thirsty.

Congress, today, is much like the Foolish Farmer of the fable.

It hears the cry of distress from the millions of unemployed and it discusses every subject under heaven except the one means of creating work for the nation's willing workers—the $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan.

It preaches economy and fails to practice it; it toys with the budget, fails to settle on an equitable plan of taxation that will yield the necessary revenue—while it passes up the General Sales Tax, which would aid in achieving the goal.

Meanwhile, like the Foolish Farmer, it fumes and fusses and frets and, of course, in the end it must fail.

A Perilous Policy

To "Soak the Rich" With Excessive Income Taxes Is Bad for Business, Says Bainbridge Colby.

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY

NO one will question, as Mr. Hearst says, that "Congress is confused and alarmed—in fact rattled, and the Senate is just as much rattled as the House."

He likens it to "an audience in a theater which is in a panic." Admitting that "misguided efforts which burden business naturally increase unemployment and aggravate the depression," Mr. Hearst calls upon us to aid Congress with constructive suggestions and a definite program.

There is probably no "misguided effort" to which Congress has lent itself with such zest and unanimity as jacking up the income tax levies; and there is nothing it has done which has had a more repressive effect upon business revival.

A constructive suggestion would be that Congress pay some heed to the principles of economics and also the recent experiences of the United States from which it could learn the folly and the futility of carrying the income tax beyond a certain point.

THERE is a little book entitled, "Taxation: the People's Business," which could be read and digested in a single evening, which is packed with useful information on this subject. It was written by Mr. Mellon, with the assistance of Mr. S. Parker Gilbert and Mr. Garrard B. Winston, both Treasury officials, whose aid is generously acknowledged.

Mr. Mellon has suffered in prestige as the result of the deflation and the disposition to ascribe it—I think in undue measure—to the policies of his administration.

And yet, what his book contains as to the destructive effect upon business activity of excessive rates of income and profits taxes, deserves to be studied by anyone with a vote to cast on a tax measure.

President Wilson is quoted as saying, in one of his messages to Congress:

"There is a point at which in peace times high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, encourage extravagant expenditure and produce industrial stagnation, with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.'

Statistics which illustrate this truth are not lacking. Secretary of the Treasury Houston, in his annual report of 1920, speaks of the point at which a progressive income tax becomes uncollectible.

"For the year 1916," said he, "a net income amounting to $992,972,985 was included in the returns of the taxpayers having a net income over $300,000 a year. This aggregate fell to $731,372,153 for the year 1917 and to $392,247,329 for the year 1918. There is little reason to believe that the actual incomes of the richgr taxpayers of the country had fallen in that interval."

This decline continued steadily until incomes in the $300,000 class amounted in 1921 to only $153,000,000. In the same period of six years, the number of taxpayers in that class fell from 1,296 to 246, although the total of net incomes, returned for taxation, increased within the period from a little more than six billions to nineteen and one-half billions.

A SPEECH of President Coolidge is quoted, in which he says:

"Experience does not show that the higher rates produce a larger revenue. Experience is all the other way * * * * But if the rates on large incomes are so high that they disappear, the small taxpayer will be left to bear the entire burden. If on the other hand the rates are placed where they will produce the most revenue from large incomes, then the small taxpayer will be relieved."

Mr. Coolidge reminds us that it has been the experience of the Treasury and it is the opinion of the best experts that the rate which will collect most from the people of wealth, thus giving the largest relief to the people of moderate wealth, is not over 25 per cent.

The advocate of a "soak the rich" treatment of income assessment ignores the fact that high taxes always lead to a high price level. It is not alone the persons who are directly assessed who ultimately pay the taxes. They are passed on in large measure to consumers and many a man who is not directly assessed is nevertheless a substantial contributor to the payment of the high taxes which he seeks to impose upon the other fellow.

Woman—And Other Women

Three-quarters of a movie star's salary is spent in trying to live up to the roles she plays in the pictures. Which is why many a poor little film-favorite is almost down to her last string of pearls!

If a woman could "do over" her husband as she "does over" her summer cottage every spring, marriage would be far more stimulating and less monotonous.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 28.—So much of me is out of kilter that the only thing I'm able to buy ready-made that fits is a back collar button. My head is shaped like a Bartlett pear, my waist is six inches too long, my neck was made especially for apple-bobbing, and I'm pie-footed.

Other guys walk into a hat, shoe or clothing store and say "Gimme that!" and walk out fitted to a T. But they have to measure me, pad here and there and use a little reenforced concrete. Even after all this I look as though they cut me down from the hangman's noose just in time.

I never give a suit to a servant but what, after seeing him wear it, I exclaim to myself: "Why the duce did I give that away? Take one of my ties—go ahead, everybody helps themselves—on me and you would think I was sitting for a comic Valentine.

If it is a four-in-hand it goes blah suggesting a sick shoe string with the cholera morbus. If it is a bow, people try to shoo it away, mistaking it for a fly. Let any of my friends wear the same tie and Vanity Fair not only sends around a photographer but Frank Crowninshield calls in person.

Then there's those athletic O-be-Joyfuls you see in the magazine ads. You know, handsome young Apollos brushing their teeth clad only in shorts and sleeveless shirts. Well, you should get a load of me some day in this sort of an outfit.

I look like something run through a wringer and hung in the wind to dry. Even my hair won't work. No matter how its cut or how I brush it, there is a cowlick sticking up perfectly straight in the center. Remind me to jump at you some time.

Ed Wynn—and this is no idle jest—has offered me a run of the play contract to be his stooge. All he asks of me is to saunter across the stage bareheaded in a bathing suit. He never got over seeing me walking along the beach at Atlantic City one summer.

* * *

Still I have fun trying to look human. Whenever I see someone sporting a new wrinkle I go for it in the grand manner and it always turns out as alluring as a second-rate gum boil. There was the time I saw Noel Coward with a silvered chain swooping from a suspender button to the pocket of full dress trousers. Natty, no end! This was in London, and next day I went shopping in Burlington Arcade. A few weeks later I wore the same kind of a chain to a New York party and at least 20 sidled up to whisper: "Your chain is hanging out."

* * *

Also there's my long struggle to sport a sit-down concertina opera hat. The sort you crush into a flap-jack and shove under the seat. Before a mirror in a self-cocking hat I look as though I had the world by the tail for a down-hill haul. But in a crowd the effect curdles. I feel like a Harlem undertaker with a mule-tail haircut strutting his stuff. Any ham can wear one and suggest the insouciance of Piccadilly, but I suggest a tottering Uncle Tom being helped to a bench at a plantation frolic.

* * *

I have never taken a stand against anything—excepting in Houston one evening after a snort of Major Dickson's Old Belmont I spoke rather slightingly of the boll weevil. Yet one fine day I'm going to come out against those sport shirts with the Byronic roll to the collar. I've tried them in the open-throated casual manner at summer resorts. Others in white flannels and carrying tennis rackets seemed perfectly at ease. I did fairly well around men, but whenever ladies were present I had an idea they were trying to peek down the shirt front. Just for a free giggle.

* * *

My first clash with fashion dates back to the day after the show boat departed. Griff Smith was to lead a cotillion that night, and I wanted to sport a hand-tied Ascot with a pearl stick-pin like the show boat villain wore. After choking myself until my tongue reached to here, they had to run in with corn knives and cut me out.

* * *

I've worn down several rugs trying to dude-up before mirrors, but the effect is always the same. So much so I'm ready for a Mother Hubbard and a back porch rocker. If they can just hire some one to put me out in the morning and take me in at night.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Some day, you hope, the miracle will happen.

Not here, of course, not in this tiresome life you're leading now. But some day when you can go to a new place, make new friends, do new things—then everything will be changed. Then, in a flash of wonder, joy will come, and good fortune, and release from restlessness and discontent.

Yes, some day, somewhere, somewhere else, you'll find happiness.

Is that what you're thinking, as you drudge through the old, tiresome round of chores? That's what most of us think. But—

Did you ever hear the story about the discouraged fishermen?

For a little while they had been something more than fishermen. They had been the disciples of Jesus of Nazareth, dreaming a shining dream of the Kingdom of God on earth. And, being workingmen and sick of work, they had naturally counted on much ease and glory when the kingdom should come.

Then, at last, their hardships would be over. Never more would they have to force themselves out into the desolate dawn to seek a scanty living in the cruel sea; never more be weary, and shabby, and despised.

Proud and powerful they would reign beside the Christ, and the kings of the world would bow before them, pouring riches at their feet.

So they had dreamed for a little while. Drudging through tiresome chores, walking fretfully along familiar trails, so they had dreamed.

But now Jesus was dead, killed on a cross like a common thief, and they were back on the hated fishing boat, ragged, hungry, shivering in the cold, spreading the nets with stiffened, salt-cracked hands. Gray sky above. Gray waves beneath. Despair, as dreary, in their hearts. Was this the end? Were they never to have their chance—never to find their miracle of joy?

So they muttered.

From the shore, a young man watched.

He, too, was poor. He, too, had lost a dream. He knew the hopelessness of such harsh toil, the weariness of tugging at an empty net. Pitying, he bent and built a fire in the rocks, then brought a fish and laid it on the coals. Presently, over the water, he sent a hail:

"Fishermen, are you hungry?"

Dully they listened; dully answered "No." Why should that stranger care whether they ate or starved?

"What have you caught?"

What had they ever caught? Nothing but weariness, poverty and disappointment since the day they were born. These empty nets were a symbol of all their lives. What had they caught?

"Nothing," they answer, sullenly.

"Cast your nets down on the right side," again the wanderer cried.

The man was a pestering fool, they thought, but they obeyed.

A cast, a sudden swirl; the nets bulged full!

"Come, now, and eat."

As men, sleep walking, in they came, and there before them was a little fire, a broiling fish, a loaf of new baked bread.

Warmth, rest, food, friendliness and cheer, and standing radiant above the flame, their Lord!

At last, the miracle!

But not in some far land, in some proud place of power.

There, on the bench where they had always worked.

Beside the tide that they had always known.

A simple fire, a simple meal—a Love.

There, was the wonder waiting!

There, was peace and joy!

* * *

And you? Restless? Wondering? Waiting for your chance?

Do not wait. Do not wonder. Build your fire; find your comfort—in the earth you know.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Reticence

No other sound in all the world I hear,
No song of sea, no lilt of mating birds,
Can ever to my ear be half so dear
As is the music of your tender words;
For with your words you feed my hungry heart
And give me strength to face the world anew.
With drafts of cheer they only can impart,
Your precious words that are as brave as you!
But sweeter yet, your rapt and silent moods
When to your spirit, far withdrawn, I kneel;
For I can read in those still interludes
The tender thoughts your musing eyes reveal.
I prize you; every message, grave or gay,
But hold most dear the words you never say!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Are you much inclined to be suspicious?

If you are tendered a favor do you immediately wonder what they "want in return?"

It takes much of the joy in receiving to begin to question the motive that led to the gift or the kindness accepted.

You are wholesouled in doing little things for others.

You are generous and free in spirit and enjoy giving pleasure to your friends without thought of reward or return.

Can't you give others credit for being as wholehearted in distributing thoughtful service or favors?

Don't be the sort that takes and never gives.

On the other hand, don't be in such a hurry to return a kindness that you make the one who bestows a courtesy sorry that the idea was carried out.

You can be too punctilious in returning in kind, but that is far better than to be the gold digger sort, always eager to accept and never ready to reciprocate.

It takes much of the beauty out of friendship to be always measuring what someone desires from you by what they do for you in particular cases.

Cultivate the generous spirit of good fellowship without suspicion.

Isn't It So?

The more time there is saved, the less there seems to be left.

Dollars and sense are two essentials to success.

It's up to you to win the prize, let others explain how they lost it.
